TRY GUNMAN DUDDY FOR DIAMOND THEFT

CAILLAUX'S FIRST WIFE, AS WITNESS, IN RAGE AT RIVAL

PARIS, July 23.—Mme. Gueydan, divorced wife of Joseph Caillaux, this afternoon suddenly became the central figure and the storm centre in the trial of Mme. Henriette Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of Le Figaro.

The courtroom where the wife of the former French Premier and Minister of Finance is on trial, became a theatre in real life with scenes so intensely dramatic that the spectators were swept away by them.

When Mme. Gueydan took the witness stand she faced the woman who had succeeded her in the heart of Caillaux, and the incidents which followed were replete with sensational thrills.

Mme. Gueydan told the complete story of her life, beginning with her girlhood and continuing down to the present day. Her story was told with graphic simplicity, but at times the woman was carried away with emotion and anger, and then she leaned forward across the rail of the witness stand with eyes aflame with rage.

Mme. Gueydan pictured the story of her courtship by M. Caillaux, who was then a struggling figure in the world of finance and politics. She told of her marriage and her married life. Her recital pictured happy domesticity, with the wife encouraging and advising her husband.

Then Mme. Caillaux, then the wife of M. Claretie, entered upon the scene. The happiness of her married life then was blighted, for Caillaux

To Use New Subway Entrance Sunday

The new entrance to the Boylston street subway will be used for traffic probably some time during the day Sunday, and certainly not later than Monday morning. In order to permit laying of the inbound track in the subway entrance on Boylston street and making connection, through an opening in the subway wall, with the inbound track in the old subway, all Boylston street subway cars will be diverted, both inward bound and outward bound, Saturday night at 8 p. m., and will be operated through the Pleasant street entrance of the subway until the track work is completed.

Brookline Tax Rate $1.20; Now $14.50

The taxes in Brookline, the wealthiest town in the country, still continue to jump. Today the assessors declared a tax rate of $14.50, an increase of $1.20 over 1913. This makes the tax rate the highest in the history of the town. The assessors give as a reason for this high rate the larger appropriations which are an increase of $107,140 over those of 1913.

MAIDENHEAD, Eng., July 23.—Pugilist "Bill" England died today as a result of injuries suffered yesterday in a prize fight with Soldier Eggleton. The fight was stopped by the police in the fifth.

NEW CLEW MAY SOLVE MYSTERY

Leonard Taylor said today that murder is the only explanation for the death of his sister, Miss Ada Taylor, the nurse whose body was found floating off Winthrop Beach a week ago today.

The brother demands the capture and punishment of his sister's slayer.

Mr. Taylor had refused, up to today, to voice his suspicions regarding his sister's death. But, just before leaving here today on the St. John boat with his sister's body, he said to the AMERICAN:

"All the theories that the police are working on now are murder theories, and those are the correct ones.

"I hope that the one who caused my sister's death will be caught and punished."

The Metropolitan Park police, who are conducting the investigation, have a new and promising clew to the person responsible for the girl's death. Chief West of that force admits that this new clew is "the best yet—it is apparently the real thing."

Unremitting search was kept up today for the following:

The missing wicker suit case which the girl carried away from the Ceder home on Shirley street, Winthrop, three days before her body was found.

The man whose photograph was found in a locket in the girl's trunk in the North Station. The trunk must not be confused with the suit case, which is still to be located.

A man supposed to have been Ada Taylor's husband. The police believe that a husband will come into the case yet. Different persons with whom Ada Taylor lived have referred to the girl nearly always as "Mrs. Taylor."

These three lines of search—the suitcase, the original of the photograph and the "husband"—were the principal interest of the police investigators today.

It may develop that the two latter—the original of the photograph and the supposed husband—are one and the same.

MAY BE SAME PERSON.

Whether they are the same or two different persons the police would like very much to find them, in order to get all information possible.

The wicker suitcase is regarded as very important, in that it might contain letters, more photographs or other material which would shed light on this beach tragedy. Inspector Maurice Finn of the Metropolitan force, who has been hard on the trail

TO BREAK RAILROAD MONOPOLY

NEW YORK, July 23.—The United States Government today began its active prosecution of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad when the Department of Justice filed a bill in equity against the New Haven road as a monopoly in the United States District Court here at noon today.

The bill charges that the New Haven has violated the Sherman act "in various ways by restraining trade and commerce in the New England States, and has acquired monopolies of railroads and water transportation and trolley transportation in Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and New York."

The bill asks for a dissolution of the alleged monopoly. It emphasizes the density of population in the territory involved, which it is claimed makes the violation of the Sherman act the more reprehensible.

"UNFAIR COMPETITION."

After reviewing the entire history of the New Haven road, the bill charges that "In some cases the physical properties of competing companies have been purchased or leased; in others, all or part of the stock has been purchased or contracts made insuring New Haven control, by unfair competition and illegal practices some competitors have been impoverished and their acquisition rendered easy, and in some cases rival lines have been forced out of business and in some instances purchased and suppressed."

The bill further charges that in bringing about these results "Complicated and elusive methods have been resorted to in order to conceal the real character of the transaction and to destroy the identity of the lines acquired and to render their assets and physical properties indistinguishable."

The Department of Justice further alleges that this was done in an attempt to so entrench the New Haven company in its monopolies as to make it impracticable for the government to apply specific remedies or to restore original conditions.

TEN COMPANIES NAMED.

Ten railroad systems are named in the bill of equity against the New Haven. These are the New York, New Haven & Hartford, the Old Colony Railroad Company, the New York & New England Railroad Company, the Concord & Montreal Railroad Company, the Fitchburg Railroad Company, the Central New England Railroad Company, the Boston & Maine

Red Sox Trailing Mackmen in Great Race for Pennant

HOW THEY STAND TODAY.

Athletics	52	32	.619
Boston	48	40	.545

Boston is on the road to a pennant.

The Red Sox are in second place only six games to the bad.

Two games are on the card today and a double victory means another jump in the standing.

The Athletics are leading in the race, but they are only six games to the good and they are due to "break."

Every ball fan in New England is figuring today just what chances the Boston boys have to land the flag.

The early fans who followed the AMERICAN'S "dope" a week or so back have it already figured out and everything looks brighter than it did in 1912 when Boston won the world's championship.

The two games today with the Browns finish the soft stay at home and they start west where they open with the Nats and at their present stride the Cleveland team will not bother them much.

Carrigan and his men want the pennant for Boston and it is up to every fan to help out.

Go up and root for the Red Sox. It was done before. Do it again.

Thieves Take Tire from Automobile

COMPANION OF ROBINSON TO GO BACK TO SOUTH

Requisition papers for Joseph Duddy, who was with "Diamond Chip" Robinson in the Boylston Cafe when the attempt to arrest Robinson led to the shooting of Inspector Norton, arrived in Boston today from West Virginia, where he is wanted on a charge of stealing $15,000 worth of jewelry from the store of Henry Hormick, in Huntington.

Governor Hatfield of West Virginia signed the papers, and they were first presented at police headquarters. They were taken to the District Attorney's office, and Inspectors Claflin and Lynch took them from there to the office of Governor Walsh.

INDICTED WITH ROBINSON.

Duddy was indicted with Robinson for the murder of Inspector Norton, but it is not now expected he will be tried here. He will be turned over to the West Virginia authorities.

Seven splendid diamonds, part of the booty of the loot of "Diamond Chip" Robinson's long career of crime, which culminated in his suicide yesterday in the Charles street jail, have become the centre of what promises to be a sensational legal battle.

The diamonds, with Robinson's other belongings, were seized by the police when he was arrested. They are held, with money that was in Robinson's possession, pending court arbitration of the claims for them.

The principal claimants are expected to be Mrs. Jennie Robinson, Robinson's mother, and Mrs. Dora Robinson, his wife. It is understood that have already engaged Boston counsel to protect their interests.

The total value of Robinson's loot and money is believed to be over $2,000.

Mrs. Jennie Robinson is expected

REPORT CARMAN MAID SAW DEATH PISTOL IN HOME

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 23.—District Attorney Smith is ready to prove a .38-calibre pistol was seen in the Carman home prior to the shooting of Mrs. Louise Bailey, according to a statement by Detective W. J. Burns today.

It is said the District Attorney will depend upon the testimony of the colored maid, Celia Coleman, to prove the presence of the revolver in the house. The maid in her testimony before the Grand Jury told of having seen Mrs. Carman carry some alleged object under her arm when leaving and returning to the house on the night of the shooting.

"Has the revolver been found?" he was asked.

"I am not prepared to say anything further than that the prosecution has completed the case by connecting every part of the circumstantial evidence."

District Attorney Lewis J. Smith and Sheriff Stephen Pettit were at Poughkeepsie today. That the prosecution expects to produce the revolver at the trial or to prove in the absence of the weapon by witnesses that it was in the house, Burns declined to say. He would not comment on the new evidence said to be in the possession of the prosecution showing the exact time when the revolver was last seen or known to have been in the Carman home.

SEARCH FOR GUN.

It was intimated by the detective that the weapon had not been found and that the prosecution will depend upon witnesses to establish its presence in the house.

"No efficient and timely search was made for the revolver used by the assassin," Mr. Burns continued. "I was called into the case on July 4 and it was several days later, I believe, before any systematic efforts were made to find it. Personally I considered it almost useless to take part in this search after the lapse of so much valuable time and opportunity to dispose of the weapon. There are numberless swamps in the vicinity where the gun could be concealed and its recovery made practically impossible.

"There were two features of the case on which I sought information particularly and in which I asked the co-operation of Dr. Carman. He promised to aid me, but ultimately he declined to give me any assistance. He was asked for a list of all his patients for some time prior to the shooting. Finally, he declined to furnish me these names on his books on the ground of privileged confidence between physician and patient.

BURNS' WORK ENDS.

"I tried to have the dictagraph used by Mrs. Carman reconnected with the physician's office and her room upstairs. He refused this request also."

Burns denied that he had withdrawn from the case. He said he had agreed with the District Attorney that it was useless to increase the expense on the county for further detective work at this time as all that could be accomplished of importance by the investigation of the Burns men had been done.

The crowds of curiosity seekers and would-be detectives that have been flocking to Riverview Farm at Haven Rock, N. J., where Mrs. Carman is in seclusion, met with disappointment again today.

Having been put to rout the day before by a thunder storm, they returned more eager than ever to catch a glimpse of the accused woman, but Mrs. Carman remained indoors all day.

Mrs. William Smith, wife of the caretaker of the Carman farm, said Mrs. Carman had passed a restless night, being kept awake by the storm. Mrs. Smith admitted that Mrs. Carman is in a highly nervous condition, and said that the strain is beginning to tell not only on her but also on the doctor.

DOCTOR HAS "GUARD."

A few minutes later Dr. Carman, accompanied by his nine-year-old daughter Elizabeth, the two Smith boys and a couple of girl neighbors, came out of the house and entered the automobile. When he caught sight of the crowd outside the gates he called for one of the guards, a hunchback, "Humpy" Painter, to go with the party. Painter jumped on the seat with Carman and the machine dashed down the Federal Twist road to Raven Rock, across the Delaware bridge to Lumberville, Pa., where he drew up at the Black Bass Inn.

The doctor alighted at the inn, where the reporters have quarters, and while his daughter Elizabeth and her friends crossed to the general store and bought picture post cards, Dr. Carman enjoyed refreshments with the proprietor, jesting over the way he had outwitted the reporters.

"Tell them when they return that I called and left my regards," he said. "Tell them that while they were racing down the road after me, I was sitting in their hotel enjoying a drink. You can also tell them that when they return to the farm we will again have flown and they will not have an easy time to find us."

By the time the slow vehicle used by the reporters pulled up at Black Bass Inn, Dr. Carman was crossing Point Pleasant bridge, two miles further up the river, on his return home.

There the reporters found him later. Through the open window Mrs. Carman and the doctor were seen in the dining room laughing at the efforts of their daughter and her friend to do a turkey trot. Mrs. Carman, who looked far from ill, had on a dainty house dress of pale blue voile, lace trimmed. In response to a knock "Humpy" Painter came to the door, admitted the reporter to the parlor and went to summon the doctor, who entered the room smiling.

TEARS UP MESSAGE.

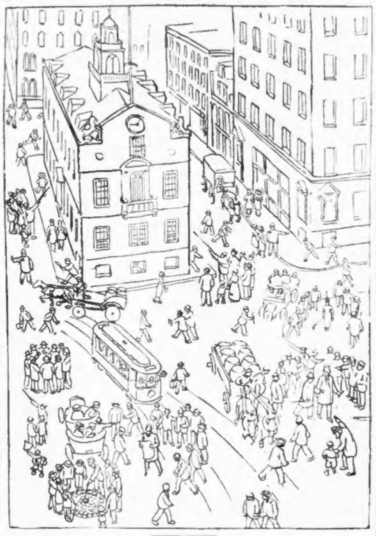

He took the message, a request from the reporters for permission to make a photograph of Mrs. Carman. She walked into the room and demanded to know what the note contained. Dr. Carman began reading it, but before he had half finished Mrs. Carman snatched the letter from his hands and in an angry voice shouted:

"So it's from those newspaper men again. Well, tell them that is my answer," and she tore the letter to bits.

GUYED TO BOSTON

By MORTON BIRGE.

II.—STATE STREET

State street is most famous as the territory selected by Colonel "Bill" Greene in which to shoot "Tom" Lawson full of holes, but the act was cancelled for reasons best known to the Colonel.

It is one of the straightest streets in town, in a strictly geometrical sense of the word.

In the early days evil-doers were punished by being put in the stocks, or beaten at the whipping posts close by. Today the two are ingeniously combined, so that the citizen who gets in stocks generally gets soundly licked at the same time.

State street is as jammed full of history as the Garden of Eden. You can't throw a stone there without denting the glorious past. History grew so rampant there when the town was young that the street wasn't long enough to hold it all, so they squeezed the water out of the tidal flats at the foot of the thoroughfare and made it longer. Today the State Streeters reverse the aquatic process by pouring water into stocks in an unholy effort to make two million dollars grow where one million grew before.

The Boston Elevated Railway Company has yet to enter here for transportation purposes. Financially, the Elevated and State street are "next friends." So far as physical contact goes, the Elevated has the street about where it wants it, with surface and subway at one end, surface and Elevated structure at the other and the East Boston tunnel underneath. If the transportation lines came any further in there wouldn't be room for the bankers and brokers.

The principal products of this brief but entertaining thoroughfare are short hours, income taxes, familiar quotations, Summer homes along the North Shore, club dues, coppers and contributions to fire, flood and famine funds.

One of the chief indoor sports of Gardiner M. Lane of Lee, Higginson & Company's temple of currency is adding up mile-long columns of figures, showing how "E. J. Q.," "L. N. W." and other alphabetical mysteries have loosened up for the good of the needy.

Citizens use State street for different purposes. Some go through it to Atlantic avenue and others to the bankruptcy court.

One needs to be courteous in addressing even the youngest clerk in any banking house on this street. He may be descended from the whole Declaration of Independence.

KING FAILS IN EFFORT TOWARD ULSTER PEACE

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, July 23.—King George today continued his efforts to effect peace in the home rule warfare, and though the third conference of the political leaders at Buckingham Palace concluded with the deadlock over the Ulster situation unbroken, a fourth meeting will be held tomorrow.

Up to the present the King's attempts to have the government conciliate the Ulster leaders by presenting a satisfactory compromise have failed, but he will continue his efforts until the opposing leaders refuse to meet again.

Premier Asquith spent some time in conference with the King today after the political leaders had left the palace and shortly after he returned to his office the announcement was made that another full meeting would be held tomorrow.

LEADERS CHEERED.

The length of today's meeting, which was expected to be the last, gave rise to an early hope that success would crown the negotiations, but Premier Asquith showed no elation when he left the palace. Both he and Chancellor Lloyd George were cheered by the throng of spectators when they reached the palace, but while the conference was going on the crowd was enlarged by the arrival of many followers of the Conservative chieftains and cheers were mingled with boos, when the cabinet members departed. Liberal newspapers declared today that the peace conference would be without result, owing to the efforts of the Conservatives to force a general election. They called upon the Premier to stand firm and give his opponents no further opportunity to claim that he was weakening in his position.

LIBERALS ARE FIRM.

Liberal leaders said that the deadlock originated over the problem of fixing the Ulster areas to be exempted from the provisions of the home rule bill.

That the conferences have resulted in no break between the Liberal Cabinet and the Irish Nationalist leaders was shown by the fact that John E. Redmond and John Dillon, Ireland's home rule leaders, took luncheon with Lloyd George at the Chancellor's home.

ONE DEAD IN COLLAPSE OF NATICK WALL

One man was killed, another desperately injured at Natick today when a building which was being torn down collapsed.

The dead man is Joseph Sozio, twenty-eight, of No. 15 Cutler street, Newark, N. J., and the injured man, who is at the Leonard Morse Hospital with three broken ribs, is Paul Candon of No. 3 Harrison avenue, Natick.

The two were employed by the H. D. Best Company of New York. The company had contracted to tear down a wooden building here and build on it a big cement garage for the Standard Oil Company.

The wooden building, save for one wall, was razed before today. Today the two men set about putting a rope to the remaining wall to pull it down. It fell on them, and Sozio was thrown against a cement wall. His head was crushed. Candon was buried.

BIG POLITICAL WAR, SEQUEL OF CAILLAUX CASE

fell [illegible] love with the beautiful and [illegible] Mme. Claretie.

GLARE AT EACH OTHER.

When Mme. Gueydan reached the part of her tale relating to Caillaux's divorce from her, the words tumbled from her lips in incoherent haste. At times her voice rose to a scream. She glared into the hard, cold eyes of the defendant orleaned from the witness chair as though she were about to spring at Judge Louis Albanel, the president of the Assize Court.

The woman's words pierced the tense stillness, her fists were clenched and the looks that she cast upon the prisoner were full of vengeance and hatred.

For a time Mme. Caillaux glared back at the angry witness. Then she shrugged her shoulders and turned in her chair until her back was before the witnesses gaze.

This seemed to infuriate Mme. Gueydan still further and tears of rage rolled down her chalk-white cheeks.

"They are trying to make me out a baseless woman," shouted the witness, "but they will never succeed. I have all kinds of documents to prove my words are true.

LETTERS INSPECTED.

"My married life was the happiest until this woman appeared." Here the witness shook a menacing fist in the direction of the defendant. The witness hereupon took a bundle of letters from her dress. They were tied with a lavender ribbon which Mme. Gueydan untied with trembling fingers. She had no sooner started to read one of the letters when Fernard Labori, chief of counsel for the defendant was upon his feet objecting and protesting.

"Let her read them," shouted Attorney Charles Chenu, legal representative of Gaston Calmette's children.

Spectators joined in the tumult, some crying "Yes, allow her to read them," and others shouting "No, no!"

Judge Albanel finally ruled that the letters should be read first by himself and his four asosciates to determine whether or not the jury should hear the contents. The decision was greeted with cries of "Bravo."

Then the letters were passed up to the judges who began poring over them. Mme. Gueydam did not immediately end her address to the court. She was apparently so worked up that she could not keep still.

"M. Caillaux is a very powerful man in France, and don't you forget it," she cried in vigorous accents.

Caillaux, who was seated in the very front of the spectators, eyed his former wife as though amused at her outbursts.

"Yes," she continued. "But despite his power the divorce decree was pronounced in my favor when the suit was decided in the courts."

Mme. Caillaux was very pale, but showed marvellous self-control while Mme. Gueydan was on the stand.

PREPARE FOR COUP D'ETAT.

With political passions daily mounting higher as a result of the trial of Mme. Caillaux, officials of the government showed deep anxiety over the situation today. Secret messages were sent to President Poincare and Premier Viviani, who are now in Russia, advising them to be prepared to hasten back to Paris at a moment's notice.

Seizing upon the opportunity afforded by the public clamor against Joseph Caillaux, husband of the defendant and ex-Premier, the Royalist organization are preparing for a coup d'etat, hoping to overthrow the Republic and re-establish the monarchy. Agents of the government have secured full details of the conspiracy, and it is believed that the Royalists will be unable to carry it to a successful culmination, but every possible precaution is being taken.

It is well understood that the President and Premier timed their state visit to Russia in order to be away from Paris during the Caillaux trial. They knew that Caillaux would be the storm centre of the trial and that political affairs would be injected, but anticipated only in a measure the great storm that has arisen.

GUARD IS REINFORCED.

For the third time the Republican guards about the Palace of Justice were reinforced today. This was a result of last night's outbreak by Royalists, who mobbed Caillaux and rioted in the streets until put to flight by gendarmes personally directed by Prefect Hennion.

Three troops of cavalry were also held in readiness near the Palace to curb the Royalists, angered by the arrest of their leaders, Leon Daudet and Maurice Pujo. The Royalists sent word to M. Hennion today that unless Daudet and Pujo were released, their followers would lead France in a revolt to "restore the liberties of the people and punish the traitors who, like Caillaux, have bartered away the honor of the nation."

The court room was crowded to suffocation when Judge Louis Albanel, president of the Assize Court, opened the fourth session of the celebrated case.

The political aspect of the case had heightened the public interest over night and the ears of Paris were strained for State secrets which might likely crop out.

Again the real issue, the guilt of Mme. Caillaux, was overshadowed. Political issues, involving chiefly the activities and policies of M. Caillaux while he was a member of the French cabinet, came to the fore.

Mme. Caillaux, like the vital issues of her case, shrank into the background. She was scarcely noticed when the session began. The first four witnesses who were called to the stand when the trial was resumed at noon, were for the defence. Their testimony concerned private letters which Calmette had in his possession.

A well known financier, Gaston Dreyfus, who was supposed to know much about private letters of Caillaux which Calmette had in his possession, was the first witness. He caused a surprise by saying that he knew nothing about any such documents.

Rich Clothing in the Trunk of Nurse Raises New Queries in Winthrop Beach Mystery

Remarkable discoveries, hinting at startling mysteries in the life of Ada Taylor, the Winthrop Beach victim, have followed the opening of her trunk at the North Station.

The trunk was packed with EXPENSIVE CLOTHING AND FURS AND CONTAINED SEVERAL FINE WIGS.

Ada Taylor was supposed to be a nurse. If that was all she was:

WHY did she have many expensive wigs in her trunk **?

WHY did she have a costly set of fine furs and a valuable sable cloak **?

WHY did she have a big supply of silk waists and fine lingerie **?

WHY did she possess many pairs of first-class shoes **?

WHY was she well equipped with lace collars and such dainty and expensive trifles **?

These are the questions the police seek to answer—along with the big and vital question:

Who was the young man whose picture in a gold locket was found in the trunk?

NEW EVIDENCE AIDS PROBE OF BEACH TRAGEDY

Chief West's new clew may relate to the suitcase or to a suspect. It is figured that the clew deals with the latter, but the chief is reticent about it. He says that publicity might do harm just now.

The great importance to this new clew gave rise today to a report that an arrest was in sight.

Chief West of the Metropolitan Park police, who is handling the investigation, said today:

"The new clew that we have received is apparently the real thing and through it we hope to establish how Ada Taylor met her death. The new evidence is the best yet. It is of so much importance that anything I might say now might defeat the ends of justice.

"Personally, I reluctantly withhold this information from the press. I realize and appreciate the excellent work of the newspapers in connection with this case and as soon as the proper time arrives I will make known the phase of the mystery upon which my men are now working.

HUNT TAKES TIME.

"If some one would only bring that suitcase to light I am sure this mystery would speedily be cleaned up. Until that is found I fear we will have great difficulty in getting to the bottom of this case. When it is brought to my office, I expect to find in it the things that will give us much necessary information.

"The process of running this man down will be a slow one, and the men who are on the case will have to have time. We are doing all we can to solve the mystery, but until today did not have anything tangible to work on. The strange ways and life of the woman have been in themselves the most baffling of all.

"If the Taylor woman, after leaving the Ceder home in Winthrop, went to Boston and engaged a room and left the suit case there, surely the proprietors of the lodging house would come forward with it. There has been enough publicity about it."

The chief said he believes the case is in the water at Winthrop and that pehaps an easterly storm will wash it up. Bathers have searched the shore around Winthrop, but have not looked further out than ten feet from the low water mark for it.

The body of Miss Taylor was shipped from Boston to St. John, N. B., by boat today. It was accompanied by her brother, Leonard L. Taylor. At St. John the body will be sent by rail to Tidnish for burial.

The funeral will take place from the home of her invalid sister, Mrs. Ida C. Reid.

CLEWS POINT TO TRAGEDY IN RESERVOIR

The police early today started to drag the reservoir at Arlington Heights for the body of a woman believed to be Daisy Spear, forty-two, and single, who is believed to have drowned herself there yesterday.

Miss Spear lived at No. 94 Concord avenue, Cambridge. She disappeared yesterday morning. Early today her hat and coat, the pocket in the latter containing a letter addressed to her and written by a cousin in Burlington, Vt., were found on the shore of the reservoir, back of the Arlington car barns.

With her niece she went to the Cambridge subway yesterday. Here they parted, Miss Clapp coming into Boston to do some shopping.

When Miss Spear did not return home last night her relatives became anxious and notified the police. She was traced to Arlington, where her hat and handbag were found beside the reservoir.

"It is our hope that Daisy sat by the reservoir, got up and walked off, leaving her hat and handbag behind," said Miss Clapp today. "Of course we are worried, but we hope she is still alive."

Mrs. G. N. Clapp, sister of Daisy Spear, said:

"Daisy is the last person in the world I should have thought would have committed suicide. I think I know the reason if it is suicide. She has not been well of late. Some little time ago she was operated upon and since then has not been at all well. Of course I don't want to say that it is suicide. It may have been accidental. She might have been picking flowers on the edge of the water and fallen in. I do not believe that she met with foul play. She hasn't an enemy in the world."

25 Nuns Flee Fire Set Near Lynn Convent

Twenty-five nuns in the convent of St. Mary's Church, Lynn, fled early today, when a $1,500 fire of incendiary origin was discovered in the old three-story wooden tenement house, nearby, extending from No. 1 to No. 20 Vivian place, near City Hall square, Lynn.

The blaze started in a closet on the second floor at No. 2 and spread throughout the structure. The family of Tony Gantiano was the only occupant of the building. They were away.

A large quantity of oil soaked excelsior was discovered. At a fire in the building a week ago a similar discovery was made. This is the tenth fire in the building since January 1.

An investigation will be made today by the State police.

McReynolds to Wed Miss Lucy Burleson

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Washington society is momentarily expecting announcement of the engagement of Attorney General McReynolds and Miss Lucy Burleson, daughter of Postmaster-General and Mrs. Burleson. This second cabinet romance has been followed with keen interest and by friends of the couple. The two are constantly in each other's company and the reports fix the wedding date for this autumn.

To Change Route of Night Car Line

Commencing tonight and continuing until further notice, all inbound Adams square night cars running on Washington street between Northampton and Dover streets, will be diverted from their regular route between 1 a. m. and 5 a. m., and will run inward bound via Northampton street, Shawmut avenue, Dover and Washington streets, and thence on their regular route. This change is made to permit the repairing of tracks on Washington street.

STONES HURLED BY MILITANT INTO PALACE

LONDON, July 23.—Eluding guards who had been stationed about Buckingham Palace to prevent an attack by militant suffragettes, a lone 'fury' stormed the residence of King George today while representatives of all political parties were conferring on home rule, and created intense excitement.

As soon as the ministers had entered the palace the woman dashed from the crowd of spectators and darted through the gates and across the courtyard to the visitors' entrance.

Confronted there by a palace attache and thrust back, the woman picked up stones and hurled them through the palace windows. One fell into the room in which the home rule conference was being held and narrowly missed the head of Premier Asquith.

The guards quickly recovered from their astonishment and prevented any further demonstration. The woman took to her heels, shrieking "Votes for women," and "Down with the torturers of women," but was captured after a short chase.

Loses Suit Against J. P. Morgan Estate

NEW HAVEN, July 23.—A decision was given in the Superior Court today, in favor of the estate of the late J. Pierpont Morgan in a suit brought against it by Clarence L. Barber of New York City to recover $250,000 in judgments on claims based upon certain transactions involving properties in Mexico. The action has been before the courts of Connecticut for years. Exceptions are expected to be taken to the decision, which will carry the case to the Supreme Court of Errors.

SAYS CITY WILL LOSE MILLION BY LIGHT CONTRACT

Thomas W. Byrne, the electrical expert who investigated for the Boston union man Mayor Curley's proposed electric lighting contract, today issued the following statement:

"I noticed an article in the paper Tuesday morning by His Honor the Mayor which I thought should have an answer. Yesterday I sent a telegram and received an answer from the Superintendent of Public Works of Philadelphia, who has charge of the street lighting. My telegram was:

Mr. Cooke, Superintendent of Public Works, Philadelphia, Pa.:

Would you advise acceptance by city of Boston of $47.25 per lamp, 800 watts magnetite, ten-year contract, 4,128 hours per year? Based upon some study of these matters, what do you believe is a fair price, with fair profit to the company? Please wire, collect, for City Council meeting Thursday night. THOMAS W. BYRNE.

CONDEMNS CONTRACT.

His reply was:

Philadelphia, Pa., July 22, 1914.

Thomas W. Byrne, Boston, Mass.:

No argument can possibly be made for any figure above $30. A more reasonable figure would be $25. These lamps could be furnished with reasonable profit to the company at $30. Strongly urge you continue under existing contract until Fall, when evidence will have been submitted and decision rendered as to Philadelphia prices. If Boston approves this contract it would be a nation-wide calamity. Command us if we can help further.

MORRIS L. COOKE,
Superintendent Public Works.

"I fail to see any sufficient reason for the Mayor to slow up on recommending the Council to approve the contract with the Edison Company".

"Translated into dollars, the city of Boston is going to lose on a $50 basis per lamp $127,650 a year, or over $1,000,000 in ten years.

"This ought to be all the answer I need to make in representing the labor unions, who only ask full consideration of this contract, which so far has not been given.

"Now, referring more particularly to the article by the Mayor, he states that the saving to the city on these lamps at the proposed price would be about $90,000 per year on 5,000 lamps, and says that the price of $47.25 per lamp has not been reported excessive by the Finance Commission, the Chamber of Commerce and the Finance Commission's engineer, Mr. Emerson.

IMPROPER INVESTIGATION.

"The facts are that the Finance Commission do not approve this price. They recommend that the price be arbitrated.

"The Chamber of Commerce disapproves the contract.

"The United Improvement Association disapproves the contract and recommends that the prices be referred to the Gas and Electric Commission.

"In fact, every public body of whom the Council have asked assistance and information disapproved the contract.

"The Superintendent of Public Works at the Council's public hearing admitted in effect he had not investigated the figures of the Edison Company as submitted and had asked the company no questions about them.

"Mr. Emerson has made a report to the Finance Commission which in my opinion is not to be relied upon, as it is based upon Edison Company's figures, and I charge that Mr. Emerson has not properly investigated nor checked these quantities given by the Edison Company."

GRACE M. CANFIELD, who is said to have been with Lowell Sherman when the latter had a row on a New York street with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Sherman.

MISS CANFIELD MENTIONED IN SHERMAN ROW

Miss Grace Martin Canfield of Providence and New York, the Titian-haired beauty who eloped with and married Martin Hannon, the Dartmouth graduate and son of a well-to-do Dorchester family, when she was only sixteen and who divorced him three years later, is mentioned in dispatches from New York today, describing a sensational fracas between Lowell Sherman, the matinee and "movie" idol, and Sherman's father and mother. According to the police story, young Sherman struck his mother, was arrested and was released in the night court later only upon his mother's tearful plea.

Lowell Sherman is the son of John Sherman, also an actor. Mr. and Mrs. John Sherman were strolling along upper Broadway in the late afternoon. They met their son, who was escorting a winsome girl said to be Miss Grace Canfield, formerly Mrs. Martin Hannon.

Mrs. Sherman grasped her son's arm. The police say that the girl struck away and said something which caused the elder Sherman to attack his son with a cane. Mrs. Sherman was struck in the face, she said, by her son's fist. There is a tremendous hubbub, right at Broadway and Forty-seventh street, Lowell Sherman was arrested. His fair young companion fled in the excitement.

In the night court Magistrate Marsh reluctantly granted Mrs. Sherman's tearful request that her son be released.

CAPE COD CANAL CUTS DANGER TO COAST TRAFFIC

How much business in the new Cape Cod Canal going to get, with its two big arguments—shorter route and elimination of danger?"

That question is interesting maritime and mercantile circles, now that the formal opening of the Cape Cod cut is less than a week distant.

The promoters of the $12,000,000 enterprise are confident that their canal will get its full share of the freight and passenger traffic now following the outside route.

The passenger traffic amounts to about 500,000 people annually. The freight tonnage around the Cape amounts to more than 13,000,000 tons. Some maintain it is a round twenty millions.

The canal will cut seventy miles from the present outside distance between Boston and New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. This seventy-mile cut means a corresponding lessening of time. Time, in the case of steamers especially, is valuable, "as lease hours mean less coal and labor.

The history of shipping wrecks shows the perils of the outside route, especially in cold weather.

The new canal relies much on its cut-off in miles and hours and on the safe passage to attract a great volume of business.

It is figured that one-half the present tonnage around the Cape will give the canal an annual income of $1,000,000.

The canal will start, at its formal opening next Wednesday, with a depth of fifteen feet. But dredging will be done to a depth of twenty-five feet. When that is accomplished the canal will pass any vessel in the coastwise traffic, with the exception of five or six largest.

There are 25,000 craft which make the trip around stormy Cape Cod each year, of which 30 per cent are sailing vessels and the remainder steamers or towed barges. There are a half-dozen lines making regular trips.

The 19,000,000 or 20,000,000 tons of freight include 11,000,000 tons of coal alone. Then there are 1,800,000 tons of lumber, 2,000,000 tons of sundry hard class freight, three-quarters of a million tons of stone, a half-million of ice and oil, and enough miscellany to bring the total tonnage up to nearly a score of millions.

Life Guard Captain Instructs Bathers in 'Safety First'

CHICAGO, July 23.—These "Don'ts" for the safety of bathers have been listed by Captain Peter Jensen of the Evanston life saving station:

Don't venture in the water alone, no matter how good a swimmer you are.

Don't frequent isolated bathing beaches where there are no life guards.

Don't try to swim any distance in water beyond your depth.

Don't dive in unfamiliar water.

Don't fail to give thought to the undertow. Don't forget to watch out for the winds that increase the undertow.

FIVE WOMEN AMONG STATE'S NEW LAWYERS

Five women are included among the 123 persons passing the latest examinations for admission to the Massachusetts bar. Among the successful applicants also is Charles B. Fugg, a son of Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts.

The successful women are: Miss Josie Sipprelle of No. 22 Harvard avenue, Brookline; Miss Harriet Weller of No. 1251 Commonwealth avenue, Allston; Miss Harriet A. Smith of No. 22 Westland avenue, Boston; Miss Catherine Dolan of No. 59 West Cedar street, Boston, and Miss Agnes Roop of Lexington.

Miss Sipprelle was born in Mattawamkeag, Me., and was graduated from the East Maine Seminary. She has taught school in Maine and in Massachusetts and is now a graduate from the Boston University Law School.

PLAN TO FEED EDELSON GIRL THROUGH TUBE

NEW YORK, July 23.—Rebecca Edelson, the militant I. W. W. girl, who is on a hunger strike in the Blackwell's Island Penitentiary, has one more day of grace. If she refuses to eat today she will be forcibly fed. This is the declaration of the authorities who have agreed upon the following method:

She will be rolled in a pair of blankets so that her legs will be kept immovable, and her arms kept fast at her sides. The blankets will then be drawn as tight as possible and made fast with safety pins, and only her head will protrude, a la Indian papoose.

Warm soup or broth will then be poured through a one-third of an inch rubber tube inserted into the nasal passage leading to the throat.

The prescription is that of Dr. Katherine Davis, Commissioner of Correction, and it carries with it the additional instruction, "Repeat as frequently as necessary."

She doesn't think that I am going to sit three months with my finger on her pulse, looking after her well-being," said Commissioner Davis today. "I am not."

"And I hope she doesn't get the idea that she is going to be offered chocolate bonbons or ice cream soda to induce her to eat. She may eat or fast, just as she wants and if she fasts I am going to have her forcibly fed. There will be no foolishness about the matter."

Woman Rescued by So. Boston Life Savers

Captain John McDonough of the South Boston Life Saving Station effected his first rescue since he became head of the station when he saved Mrs. Joseph Bowers, wife of Joseph Bowers, a well-known Dorchester yachtsman, after she had been thrown out of a dory on her way to her motor launch.

Walsh Addresses Poultrymen at Amherst Today

AMHERST, July 23.—Today, Governor's Day, has been looked forward to with much interest by the poultry fanciers gathered here, for a program of much more than usual interest has been arranged. It is expected Governor Walsh will deliver an address in the afternoon, the subject being "The State as a factor in the development of such agricultural industries as poultry culture."

One of the most interesting parts of the program will be the address of Professor Graham on "A Poultry Farm to Massachusetts." A miniature plan of the plant will be shown at the poultry plant of the college, which was carefully inspected this afternoon.

Call Southern 'New Haven of the South'

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Southern Railway has been imposed on much as the New Haven through the unloading upon it of branches of little worth at fabulous prices, according to R. L. Dulaney, a Tennessee coal operator, who said he once offered to sell control of the Virginia & Southwestern Railway to the Southern for $500,000. His offer was refused, he said, but later Henry K. McHarg sold the line to the Southern for about $6,500,000, with a profit estimated at $4,000,000.

Farmer Gets 35 Cents of Dollar, Says Glynn

UTICA, N. Y., July 23.—Governor Glynn at the conference of Co-operative Farm Societies, says: "For every dollar the consumer pays for farm produce the man who raises it receives but 35 cents. When co-operation goes tangoing into politics, flirting with feminism, chumming with pietism and wrinkling at communism, destruction awaits it just around the corner."

5 Firemen Burned in Worcester Blaze

WORCESTER, July 23.—Two members of the fire department were probably fatally burned, while Chief Avery and District Chief McCarthy barely escaped death, during a fire in a house at No. 84 Bangor street.

FRAMINGHAM MAN IS SLAIN BY HIS DEBTOR

FRAMINGHAM, July 23.—Eight police and many volunteer citizens set out today to search the Apple street woods for a man who shot and killed Petro Lassagano last night in the Italian quarter and then escaped.

Petro Lassagano claimed that this man owed him $4. Lassagano met the man in a house in the Italian quarter last night and demanded the money.

"Come outside and I'll give it to you," the slayer said.

Lassagano followed him into the street. The man looked around, saw none were near, and cried "There."

Then he fired three shots at Lassagano. Two entered Lassagano's left side below the ribs. Lassagano dropped. The assailant turned and ran—escaped into the woods. Lassagano was taken to the Framingham Hospital, where he died early today.

The police set out late last night in a vain hunt for the fugitive. They found a revolver near the scene of the shooting, and the bullets it was the one he used. But it is supposed that he may have another weapon, as he could hardly throw away his only gun. The eight officers today moved carefully, ready to shoot to kill if the hunted man when found resisted.

6 Killed in Battle in Russian Strike

ST. PETERSBURG, July 23.—Desperate fighting between soldiers and police on one side and workmen on the other occurred today in the strike which has made 200,000 men idle in Russia. During the night the strikers erected barricades in the streets, and at dawn Cossacks started to raze these fortifications, fighting following. The troops poured several volleys into the strikers, killing six and wounding eleven. Street railway traffic has been partially restored. The labor unrest has marred the visit of President Poincaire. The program of entertainment has been curtailed.

3,000 FREIGHT HANDLERS NEAR STRIKE CRISIS

Local 5,572, Freight Handlers' Union of the Boston & Maine System, is expected to vote for a strike at its meeting on Sunday unless an agreement is previously had with the officials of the road. The men claim they get less than $700 a year and say that many have large families.

A strike of more than 3,000 freight handlers employed on the Boston & Maine, the Boston & Albany and the New Haven Roads is threatened.

The members of the union are now receiving $13.80 for a six-day week, of ten hours a day, with pay stopped on all holidays they do not work. The demands of the men call for an increase in wages of 15 per cent. and a decrease in working hours from ten to nine hours a day. The Boston & Maine directors are expected to take up the situation today.

United States May Intervene in Hayti

WASHINGTON, July 23.—There is a possibility of American intervention in Hayti and Santo Domingo. Late official dispatches gave but little hope that the contending elements in the two countries would be able to restore order. The gravity of the situation was increased by refusal of the warring factions in Hayti to cease fighting, despite the American government's warnings and its failure to settle the Dominican revolution by diplomacy.

Montreal Baseball Grandstand Burned

MONTREAL, July 23.—The grandstand at Atwater Baseball Park, where the International League games are played in this city, was destroyed by fire today. This was the second time the stand was burned. Providence was scheduled to play the Montreal team here this afternoon and it was undecided this morning whether the game would be played.

To Urge Winchester Line Via Cambridge

As a result of a petition of Winchester residents the public service commission has recommended that the Bay State Street Railway company operate cars from that town direct to the subway of the Boston Elevated in Cambridge.

Advanced Shoe Rates to Atlanta Denied

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has denied the proposed increase of ten cents per hundred pounds on the rate for boots and shoes from Boston and other New England points to Atlanta, Ga., by water or rail routes.

80-Cent Gas for East Boston Aug. 1

The directors of the East Boston Gas Company have accepted the recommendation of the Massachusetts Gas Commission for a reduction in the price of gas in East Boston and Chelsea to eighty cents and the new rate will go into effect August 1.

Fifty Dead Flies Earn Theatre Seat

NEW YORK, July 23.—In order to aid in the "swat the fly" movement in Bayonne the manager of one of the theatres of that city announced that every boy and every girl who brings fifty dead flies on Saturday will be admitted to the matinee performance free.

FRECKLES, MOTH PATCHES and TAN VANISH

For Absolute and Positive PROOF SEE THE BOY AT SHEPARD NORWELL COMPANY

—One-half the face of this red-haired boy is a mass of big, brown freckles—one-half his face entirely cleared of them by Kingsbery's Freckle Remover.

—To remove freckles, etc., we do not have to remove or irritate the skin. For proof of this, see the boy's arm in process of clearing.

—Have you been induced to use worthless preparations for removing these blemishes? Do not despair. See the boy and be convinced.

BIZARRE GOWN shown for the first time at Auteuil expected to be the season's raze.

'Flower Pot Dresses' Newest Paris Craze

PARIS, July 22.—Fashion announced the newest craze at Auteuil, in the form of "flower pot dresses." And today Paris is divided in enthusiasm between the Caillaux trial and these new gowns.

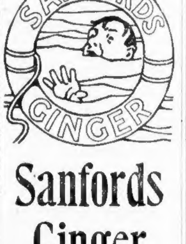

The new craze is not so much a matter of design as of the pattern of the cloth.

The prevailing form of the new dress is white silk over black, and on the white appear decorations such as potted plants, pet animals, bouquets in amphoras and such designs.

Chaliapine, Russian Singer, to Visit Hub

LONDON, July 23.—Chaliapine, the Russian baritone, who has taken London by storm, will visit the United States in 1916 at the head of a Russian grand opera organization. Chaliapine will receive more than $5,000 for each performance. He will visit Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia.

TO SURRENDER MEXICO CITY TO CARRANZA

CIUDAD VICTORIA, State of Tamaulipas, Mexico, July 23.—Negotiations for the surrender of Mexico City to the Constitutionalists are going on today over a telegraph wire working from General Carranza's headquarters directly into the capital. Ingeniero Roblas Dominguez is acting as Carranza's agent in the capital and there is in communication with President Carbajal.

The proffer of the Provisional President to turn the government over to Carranza has been submitted to the Constitutionalist leader, and a reply has been returned by him. The details outlined in these messages were withheld today, but Carranza has apparently abandoned his intention of going to Tampico and probably will proceed to San Luis Potosi.

Young Elopers Are Remarried in Lynn

For the second time, Miss Catherine V. Meehan, twenty-one, of No. 14 Stickney street, Lynn, was married to Patrick O'Connor, twenty-one, of No. 29 Miller street, the same city. On May 23 they eloped to Revere and were married by a justice of the peace. Mrs. Timothy Meehan, upon hearing of the marriage, arranged for a religious ceremony which was performed last evening at St. Mary's parochial residence. Timothy O. Meehan, father of the bride, refuses to allow the couple in his home.

Four Dead; 21 Hurt in Trolley Crash

WESTPORT, Ct., July 23.—Four persons are dead and twenty-one are injured, some seriously, as the result of a head-on collision between a train of three trolley cars, carrying many Sunday school children home from a picnic and a trolley freight.

The dead all belonged in Bridgeport. They are: Andrew Fisher, sixteen; Raymond Fuller, twelve; Frank Nagry, eleven; Mabel Cleveland, twenty-one.

Girl Dies of Burns.

NEWBURYPORT, July 23.—Mary Hannan of Danvers, twenty-one, who was burned last Sunday at Hampton Beach by the explosion of an alcohol lamp, died today at the Anna Jacques Hospital.

ARREST ILLEGAL, CLAIM OF GUNMAN'S LAWYERS

to come to Boston to press her claim. Mrs. Dora Robinson is likewise trouble—and near death at her home in Washington Court House, Ohio.

But Robinson's mother and wife are not the only claimants. Others are:

1—John P. Leahy, acting in behalf of Henry Homrick of Huntington, West Virginia.

2—The Michigan jeweler, John J. Thompson, whose store was robbed by a gang of which Robinson is claimed to have been the leader. It was in this robbery that three clerks were killed, and it was in connection with this robbery Robinson was sought at the time he killed Norton.

GEMS IN HIDDEN POCKETS.

Still other claimants are expected to arise—men and women whom Robinson had robbed in his spectacular career. A bill in equity has already been filed in behalf of Homrick, and other court action is expected to follow shortly.

The fight over these diamonds will be one of the hottest Massachusetts has seen. The gems were found in hidden pockets in Robinson's clothes when he was arrested.

Dispatches from Washington Courthouse, Ohio, today declare that Robinson's wife, weak from heart trouble, stepped when she was informed of the death of her husband and is in a very critical condition; a doctor is at her bedside.

The death is no surprise in Robinson's home town, as such an ending has been freely been predicted. The mother has wired to hold the body, and is reported on her way to Boston.

The plan for the defence of Robinson—so dramatically nipped in the bud by the accused man's suicide—was revealed for the first time today.

This plan, as it became known to the AMERICAN, gives the details of the fight which Attorney John H. Blanchard, and his son, Hugh C. Blanchard, counsel for Robinson, were to have made, not only to save him from the electric chair, but in the hope of winning him an acquittal.

The big features of the defence would undoubtedly have come—had the trial not been abruptly halted by Robinson's self-sought end—as "surprises" for the public.

It would have been contended by the defence that Robinson, if he did shoot Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, fired when he was DAZED BY A BLOW FROM THE CLUB OF A POLICE OFFICER in the Boylston Cafe and that he was NOT IN A MENTAL CONDITION TO KNOW WHAT HE WAS DOING.

In connection with this feature, the defence was to have put on the stand a Boston young woman—the only woman who was to appear in Robinson's behalf.

She is Miss Helen Hannon, the Boylston Cafe waitress who served Robinson an order of lamb chops a short while before Norton came to make the arrest, and who was an eye witness of Robinson's desperate struggle in the cafe.

Robinson himself was to have taken the stand to tell the jury the story of being hit with a club and of being dazed.

There were to have been two other important witnesses for Robinson—Dr. James F. Coupal, as a medical expert, and James Burns, of the United States Cartridge Company, as an expert on firearms and bullets.

OUTLINE OF DEFENCE.

This is an outline of the defence:

That Robinson was arrested illegally.

That the slaying was a justifiable homicide—that the killing was not only not first or second degree murder, but was not even manslaughter, that Robinson had a right to resist the officer to the point of shooting and that, moreover, he was stunned by a blow from a club.

That the testimony of the Grand Rapids authorities would be inadmissible.

That the confession of Vopper Lawrence, Robinson's pal, was not admissible.

That there was a reasonable doubt in the question of who fired the shot that killed Norton; that it might have been another hand or another gun than Robinson's.

That Robinson was not guilty of the Grand Rapids murders and that he could establish an alibi in that case.

Attorney Blanchard and his son spent practically a month, working day and night, on the defence. They delved in legal records for precedents and spared neither time nor expense in rounding out their case. The senior counsel is a man of twenty years' experience at the bar and is known as one of the cleverest lawyers in Boston. It was his ability—with that of his son—in handling his case during the two days the trial lasted that caused Judge Keating and District Attorney Pelletier to congratulate them yesterday.

TO CITE MANY CASES.

Astute lawyers today declared the defence to be brilliant. They said that no more masterly defence had been prepared in a criminal case since the famous trial of Stephen L. Carey in 1886. In this trial General "Ben" Butler was counsel for Carey.

This case, by the way, was to have been cited in the trial of Robinson. Carey was charged with the murder of a constable at Lincoln. The constable had pursued Carey into a swamp. He had no warrant. Chief Justice Shaw held that the killing was not homicide with malice aforethought.

The following from the Chief Justice's opinion would have been brought forward as bearing on the Robinson case:

"In our opinion such indefinite and irregularly information, this referred to a message to the constable to arrest Carey for robbery is in itself no authority at all and an officer acting on it acts at his peril, and is no better off than any other citizen.

"The habit, which is by a very singular abuse of language called official courtesy, of making illegal arrests in one jurisdiction in the hope that similar violations of law may be reciprocated, is one which cannot be tolerated. The law places private liberty at much higher value than official favors, and violations of law by those who are appointed to protect instead of destroy private security, deserve no favor. Fundamental rules of constitutional immunity cannot be relaxed."

Another case which was to have been cited was that of Silas Peeps who was electrocuted a few years ago for the murder of Sheriff Emmett Haskins, at Monroe. The court held that arrest without a warrant except under certain conditions amounts in the eyes of the law to the officer making the arrest. In the Phipps conviction, the malice aforethought was proven in the slayer's threat just before shooting Haskins: "I'll be you or me, Haskins."

These citations were to have been made in connection with the claim of the defence that Robinson was illegally arrested. The point would have been maintained by the counsel for Robinson that the statute provides that when a man is to be arrested for a felony committed in other State he shall be arrested upon a warrant; that neither statute provides if he is arrested on a warrant he shall be brought immediately before a Judge having jurisdiction.

The claim was to be that even if Robinson did slay Norton he could only have been manslaughter without malice aforethought.

The defence had planned to use the Commonwealth testimony of this shooting in their suit for justifiable homicide.

In his opening District Attorney Pelletier released some of the facts of the shooting of Norton, explaining that his witnesses would testify to the stand the full story.

The defence had planned to make this claim:

The District Attorney told the jury that Captain Armstrong in ordering Inspectors Norton, Claflin and Cassidy to arrest Robinson, had said:

CLAIM RIGHT TO RESIST.

"He is a bad man. If there is to be any shooting, you shoot first."

It was assumed that Robinson was the man wanted for the Grand Rapids murders, said the defence. When the officers entered the cafe, Norton went over to where Robinson sat at the table. In the scuffle that followed, Norton told a detective man to "get his stick."

Norton said to Robinson, continued to struggle, exclaimed:

"Give him the stick."

It was to be said by the defence that then Robinson was hit over the head with the "stick."

Hence, in view of these things, the defence was to say, Robinson had a right to resist even to the point of shooting.

If this were proven, it was declared, it would have set the accused man free.

The defence was also ready to raise certain questions about the revolver from which the fatal bullet flew, such as:

Whose hand fired the shot is uncertain. This would leave a reasonable doubt in the jury's minds, and if they are to convict, they must believe Robinson was the slayer beyond a reasonable doubt.

Two automatic revolvers of the same calibre—32-were found. One was in the hands of a detective who said he had wrestled it from Robinson. The second was picked up from the floor of the cafe.

Could not another hand have pulled the trigger of Robinson's pistol? Was not this possible in the scrimmage that took place on the floor? Did another than Robinson fire the shot?

Was it not possible the death-dealing bullet was fired from the other revolver? And whatever weapon was fired, where was the bullet? Wouldn't a bullet fired from either have landed against the dado of the cafe? Wouldn't it either have imbedded itself or fallen to the floor in a certain spot where it was not found? A bullet was found in a space on the floor between tables, but was this the bullet which caused death?

DOUBT OVER BULLET.

Was the bullet fired by some one at Robinson? Was it fired by Robinson at Norton? Is the bullet that was picked up the one that went through Norton's body?

Did any bullet fired by Robinson hit Norton? Did he even fire any bullet at all? Isn't this a ground for reasonable doubt?

Was the weapon picked from the floor the one carried by Robinson and did Robinson know its magazine was loose and was he carrying it in order to have it repaired? Again, was it really certain the bullet which killed Norton had not been fired by someone at Robinson?

Find 4th Bullet in Gunman's Clothes

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of the fourth bullet which was fired at Robinson in his flight from the Boylston Cafe, following the shooting on June 19, was cleared up when it was found lodged in the waistcoat of the new suit which he had worn Tuesday. In his flight four shots were fired at him, three of them taking effect, but the fourth was never located. Poss'bly something in his pocket prevented its penetrating the body, and later he found it. It was discovered while searching his clothing.

ACCUSED MAN NEAR TO COLLAPSE ON LAST DAY

"Diamond Chip" Robinson, who killed himself in his cell at the Charles Street jail rather than face the strain of his trial with almost certain conviction at the end, was nervous and trembling during his last day in court, it was recalled today.

His spirit had been broken by confinement and the company of his own thoughts. He dreaded the chair or a long prison term, and as he saw the array of evidence against him, marshalled under the direction of District Attorney Pelletier, Robinson's hope of acquittal or of a light sentence vanished.

One of the heaviest blows he received was the appearance to be sworn as a witness of James Mitchell, a pawnbroker, who would have testified to the purchase of loot.

EYES ON LOCK.

Robinson betrayed his nervousness by running the index finger of his right hand across the gum of his upper set of teeth as far as it would go and then by pressing on his eye tooth.

Then he would interlace his fingers and focus his gaze upon the floor and eye the lock on the gate, which held him a prisoner in the court cage.

Unlocking his fingers, Robinson would then cross his arms, look up and stare around the courtroom, after which he would rub his forehead, smooth his hair in the back and rub his right ear.

This would be followed by a shrug of his shoulders and the placing of his left leg across his right knee.

While his leg would be resting on his right knee, Robinson gazed at his shoes. It was noticeable that he fingered the instep of his left shoe and then his right one.

Releasing his mind from his shoes, Robinson would turn his head toward the rear of the room, as if in search of a friendly face. He appeared much depressed as he not seeing some of his former friends present.

APPEARED DEPRESSED.

At the noon recess on Tuesday Robinson walked to the detention room with his guard in a sort of stooped position. It was remarked that he gave his right foot a sort of swing when raising it from the ground.

When court was reconvened at 2:40 Robinson was again brought into court from the detention room and walked with a more sprightly step, although it was very evident that he appeared much depressed over something which was on his mind.

Medical Examiner Magrath was the first witness at the afternoon session, and as he recited the condition of the body of Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton when he performed an autopsy on it, Robinson followed him very closely, especially when Dr. McGrath told of the bullet wounds made by a "Savage bullet."

When Dr. Magrath finished his testimony Judge Keating addressed the jury, stating "they would be excused till 9:30 a. m. Wednesday. This movement of the court caused Robinson to open wide his eyes with a look of astonishment.

Judge Keating had stated he intended to devote the remainder of the afternoon to discussing law points with counsel on both sides of the case.

All this time there was a heavy downpour and thunderstorm outside. When the storm started large drops of rain came in through the window, and the wind blew the copy paper of reporters about that section of the room near Robinson's cage.

STARTLED BY THUNDER.

A roar of thunder startled Robinson as he sat in his cage and caused him to look upward toward the sky. The room was very dark as a result of the storm, and court officers had to turn on the lights and close the windows.

When another clap of thunder pealed out its ominous sound Robinson son sort of shivered and clutched at the rail of the cage. He kept his eyes focussed on the window, and Court Officer Cronin, who was tugging to close it to keep out the rain and wind.

About the time the storm subsided Robinson was being escorted from the room to permit of a short recess prior to the arguments of opposing counsel on law points.

When Judge Keating took his position on the bench following the recess, Robinson was brought back to the courtroom. Instead of being placed in the cage near the jury box he was given a seat in a similar cage on the right of the courtroom entrance. This was done because the jury had been excused for the day, while the court and counsel for both sides were deliberating.

Robinson appeared much surprised at being assigned to his new quarters and showed his interest by looking with astonishment at courthouse attaches and his counsel, who did not tell him of what transpired during his absence.

For awhile he followed the arguments of his counsel as to why he should not have been arrested without a warrant. Then he gave evidence of losing interest in the discussion by gazing around the room with an unseeing stare.

The first sign of Robinson's breakdown came at the morning session, when District Attorney Pelletier outlined the case to the jury. Then, again when the latter produced three witnesses from Toledo, O.

One of these witnesses is a jeweler who bought a number of diamonds of Robinson, and the other two sold him automatic revolvers. One of the latter witnesses, it is said, was a Mr. Savage, to whom, it is claimed, Robinson represented himself as a government inspector.

As these witnesses, with others, were carried in front of the court to be sworn in, the Toledo people stood close to Robinson, and he eyed them curiously.

"Those Toledo witnesses must have unnerved Robinson," said a courthouse attache.

ROBINSON'S PLOT TO DIE BY POISON FOILED

Lawrence Robinson had been planning suicide for a week, according to the belief of some of the guards at the Charles street jail. They declare they foiled a ruse whereby he would die by poison.

The guards had been in the habit of giving the prisoner tablets to aid him in sleeping. A guard visited him in his cell every half hour during the night.

Robinson finally became apparently vexed at the officers and asked them to leave the tablet on the chair in his cell. He said he did not wish them to awaken him every time they came to his cell. He said, "I know when and how to take my medicine. I know what I am to take once every hour and I will take it all right if you will only leave it on the chair."

The pills were never left on the chair for Robinson. The guards instantly suspected that he wished to make an accumulation of the tablets so as to take a number of them at one and the same time in a sufficient potion to kill him.

It is said that the tablets contained a drug which would have killed Robinson had he been able to take a sufficient quantity at one time.

TO SAVE EYES

Is the Object of This Free Prescription—Try It If Your Eyes Give You Trouble.

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a hefty fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used two or three months, do their eyes more injury than good. Here is a simple prescription that every one should use.

5 grains Optona (4 tablet).
2 ounces Water.

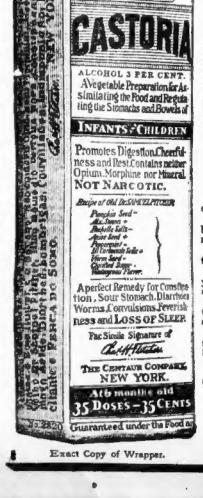

Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Optona system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Any druggist can fill this prescription promptly. Try it and know for once what real eye comfort is.

A Great Responsibility.

THE responsibility attached to the preparing of a remedy for infants and children is undoubtedly greater than that imposed upon the manufacturer of remedies for adults whose system is sufficiently strong to counteract, for a time at least, any injurious drug. It is well to observe that Castoria is prepared today, as it has been for the past 40 years, under the personal supervision of Mr. Chas. H. Fletcher.

What have makers of imitations and substitutes at stake? What are their responsibilities? To whom are they answerable? They spring up today, scatter their nefarious wares broadcast, and disappear tomorrow.

Could each mother see the painstaking care with which the prescription for Fletcher's Castoria is prepared: could they read the innumerable testimonials from grateful mothers, they would never listen to the subtle pleadings and false arguments of those who would offer an imitation of, or substitute for, the tried and true Fletcher's Castoria.

CASTORIA

Extracts from Letters by Grateful Parents to Chas. H. Fletcher.

G. J. English, of Springfield, Mass., says: "It was your Castoria that cured my child."

Mrs. Mary McGinnis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "We have given our baby your Castoria ever since she was born, and we recommend it to all mothers."

N. E. Calmes, of Marion, Ky., says: "You have the best medicine in the world, as I have given your Castoria to my babies from first to last."

Mrs. Albert Ugnag, of Lawreceburg, Ind., says: "As I have had your Castoria in use for nearly three years, I am pleased to say it is just as represented. My children are both well and happy—thanks to Castoria."

Mrs. Dolph Hornbuckle, of New Orleans, La., says: "We began giving your Castoria to our baby when he was eight days old and have kept it up ever since, never having had to give any other medicine."

Mrs. Dolph Hornbuckle, of Colorado Springs, Colo., says: "We commenced giving your Castoria to our baby when she was four weeks old. She is now seven months and weighs 19½ pounds. Everyone remarks: 'What a healthy looking baby.' We give Castoria credit for it."

Jogging Inaction Into Activity

The merchant whose business lags in the summer has himself to blame.

To slacken the selling pace in the hot season—to lessen advertising activity—indicates a resignation which has no place in modern business.

If we think we cannot keep our business booming in summer time, we sure ly will not.

What a jolt it must have been to the fur trade when the first midsummer fur advertisement was run in a western daily newspaper! Now many fur stores are following the example of that progressive fur man who dared to believe that fur sales need not go down as the mercury goes up.

Energy linked with advertising turned the month of August into one of the biggest fur-selling seasons of the year. Advertisements of a high stimulative power, combined with a disregard of "seasons," have opened up automobile selling two months earlier than was once thought possible. Advertising has started Christmas shopping early in October instead of the middle of December.

Advertising rises superior to seasons and thermometers. The right kind of advertising strikes a responsive chord in human nature—and human nature is the same in July as in December.

'DIAMOND CHIP' ROBINSON'S REMARKABLE LIFE ROMANCE

On July 7, when Lawrence (Diamond Chip) Robinson was awaiting trial, the AMERICAN was directed by the Court to cease publication of a serial story entitled "THE REMARKABLE LIFE ROMANCE OF 'CHIP' ROBINSON.' The approach of the trial, Robinson's counsel maintained, made it probable that Robinson's interests might be prejudiced. The serial was immediately withdrawn from the AMERICAN. The suicide of Robinson makes it impossible now to affect his case in any way. In answer to numerous inquiries as to the discontinuance of the serial and in order that readers who had been following it may not be disappointed, the AMERICAN now takes up the serial where it was abruptly left off.

The first six chapters dealt with Lawrence Robinson's birth, the strange pre-natal influence credited with shadowing his career, his marriage, his association with pickpockets and his two-year term in Kentucky State Prison.

Life That Proved "Truth Stranger Than Fiction"

The short but bizarre life of Lawrence Robinson calls to mind that oft-quoted extract from Lord Byron:

"'Tis strange, but true; for truth is always strange—
Stranger than fiction."

He was born out of wedlock. A belief of pre-natal influence, foredooming him to a life of violence, attached itself to him from childhood.

He was a polished desperado. He and "Vopper" Lawrence robbed a jewelry store in Grand Rapids, Mich., and left two dead men and a third dying behind them.

Trying to escape, Robinson shot Police Inspector Norton into eternity. This cut short the dashing social career Robinson was enjoying in conservative Boston.

Defiant to the last, Robinson cheated the executioner and broke the Supreme command against self-destruction. With desperate cunning, he fashioned a weapon in his cell and let out his life-blood.

Romance, violence, robbery, murder—from country boy to city plunderer—enjoying to the full the pleasures of society, at the same time a buccaneer against that very society—Lawrence Robinson scaled the heights and sounded the depths of life and all in thirty-two years.

Yet, if this same life had been pictured in any "movie" film, it doubtless would have been condemned as a "yellow thriller," too sensational for truth.

CHAPTER VII.

"Man, false man, smiling, destructive man!" (Nathaniel Lee—1655-1692.)

"Chip" Robinson emerged from the Kentucky State Prison at Frankfort a dangerous man. Two years' association with the criminals in that institution had graduated him several notches higher (or lower) in the underworld.

He had learned, for one thing, that petty robbery, picking pockets and the like, does not pay, in the lawless sense of the phrase.

Robinson apparently determined to rise to greater achievements in his sphere. He paid more attention than ever to his appearance. He bought—for he always seemed to be in funds—several suits of clothes of best quality, well cut and not too conspicuous in pattern. His shirts, ties, boots and other accessories were in harmony with his suits. His shirts and underwear were of silk. His boots cost $7 to $8 the pair. He was inclined toward gray silk or lisle gloves. The police have a theory that he choose gloves of these materials because they are smooth or "slippery," as the police say, and enable the wearer to manipulate his hands in another person's pocket with greater dexterity.

POLITE TO WOMEN.

Prison life had not rendered Robinson's manner coarse. He retained his debonair presence, his easy deference to whatever women and girls whose favor he sought for any purposes of his own. He acquired a discriminating taste in diamonds and he carried his cash in $100 bills in the secret pockets he had made in his several suits.

Robinson was in the prime of vigorous, active manhood. He kept himself in first-class physical condition. His brain and muscles "co-ordinated," as surgeons say. That is, the impulse of the brain to action was followed instantly by the muscular movement. When he wanted to strike he struck, quick and hard. He was a splendid animal, from the merely physical standpoint.

Consideration of Robinson's career from this time on leads to the belief that he had come to the resolution not to be arrested if he could "See 'em coming," as the expression goes.

He carried a revolver—for [illegible]. He may have carried one [illegible] in his career, but it was not until this later period that he was suddenly to become known as a man "on the shoot."

Consistent with his practice of having the best, Robinson carried an automatic, the deadliest weapon known to the police for fighting at close quarters.

Naturally quick with his hands, Robinson could draw this revolver and discharge it with expertness. Here the same prenatal influence which is believed to have been latent in the man's bizarre nature may have become more potent.

Robinson's own mother, now at Washington Courthouse, was asked the other day if she believed her son entered wilfully into the crimes charged against him. The despairing woman replied:

"I am something of a fatalist, and, I believe, that if Lawrence went into those crimes it is because he was the victim of circumstances."

When this statement of the mother became circulated about Washington Courthouse it was accepted as a part of the prenatal theory, vouched for by the woman who, of all on earth, would know whereof she spoke.

STRING OF ALIASES.

Robinson also rejoiced, by this time, in a string of aliases which is one of the hall-marks of the professional crook. He had traveled under the names of Albert Scott, George Roberts, Albert Adams, George Spencer, Walter E. Spencer and Harry Burton.

But he was best known under his own name of Robinson, with the soubriquet of "Chip," or "Diamond Chip," on account of his liking for the queen of jewels. His regular "monaker," as the underworld has it, was "Diamond Chip" Robinson, a title which seemed to fit him nicely.

Swaggering thus through life, "Diamond Chip" Robinson struck up an ill-fated partnership with another underworld character named Walter Lawrence, to criminals known as "Vopper."

"Vopper" Lawrence was not of the same bold, reckless stripe as Robinson. But he did not lack nerve for illicit enterprises and he and Robinson traveled amiably enough together until Fate, or their own evil desires, suddenly put a desperate turn in their [illegible].

"Vopper" and "Diamond Chip," according to positive statements of police and Pinkerton detectives, entered the city of Grand Rapids, Mich., [illegible] the middle of last September.

They were bent on flagrant breach of the law. They were planning to rob a jewelry store.

In this determination they apparently [illegible] of the elaborate service that the Jewelers' Security Alliance offers for its members. This service is mainly a protecting one. Like the Federal government, this J. S. A. never forgives nor forgets. It will follow an offender against one of its members until the end of time and then some, to quote the expression of a Pinkerton man this week.

Crooks know that if they rob the store of any member of the Alliance a reward, commensurate with the amount of booty secured, will be offered for their capture, that the dreaded Pinkertons will be put on the case and that the police of the country will be asked to look for them if any clew to their identity can be obtained.

"HANDS UP!" ORDER.

Despite this deterrent "Vopper" Lawrence and "Diamond Chip" Robinson planned not only to rob one of the principal jewelry stores in Grand Rapids, but also to "pull off the job" in daylight. A robbery of this nature is one of the boldest that a crook can undertake.

With consummate impudence the two men selected the store of John J. Thompson for their work. The Thompson store is within two blocks of the Grand Rapids police station. It is on a busy street, which is constantly patrolled. On account of the proximity of the police station any number of patrolmen, sergeants, detectives and plain-clothes men are likely to be strolling by the Thompson store, in addition to the regular man on the beat.

The two robbers took the latter part of the afternoon, when people were hurrying from work, as the time for their deed. This was a clever move, as long as it was to be a daylight job, as the more pedestrians the more confusion in which to make the necessary "getaway."

Both men went armed. "Vopper," as the police declare in the light of later events, carried a .38 calibre revolver of ordinary pattern. He was not a practiced "gunman" and his weapon was not even well cleaned.

"Diamond Chip" was armed with an automatic, oiled, loaded and deadly.

In the Thompson store at this hour on September 18, last, were John N. Thompson, cousin of the proprietor, Edward Smith, a collector who had just come to turn in his collections for the day, and Paul Townsend, a watchmaker who was in the workroom in the rear of the sales room.

There were no customers in the store. Thompson, Smith and Townsend were busy finishing their day's work, as it was near closing time, when "Vopper" and "Diamond Chip" entered.

As Smith and Tohmpson looked up to see what was wanted, two revolvers were flashed on them, accompanied by the savage order: "Hands up!"

It was a fast ride, the distance being covered in 5h. 10m. Some ride.

Once Upon a Time

there was a Mississippi steamboat with a whistle so big that every time it blew, the boat stopped. The whistle took all the steam.

There are lots of people today who exhaust all their energy every time they "blow their whistle."

The trouble is, they have no reserve to carry them through the average duties of every-day life.

Human strength and energy are obtained from food. And it is plain that it must contain the vitalizing elements which the system can take up and store as reserve power for occasions, not only ordinary, but extraordinary.

BOY MADE GOOD BY OPERATION IS BACKSLIDER

An operation for adenoids failed to reform permanently William J. Eagan, a fourteen-year-old Everett youth, who has appeared in the Malden District Court at the Juvenile session a second time.

He came before the court several months ago for misdemeanors and his father at that time pleaded with the court to allow him to have his boy operated on for adenoids, as he believed this would cure the boy of tendency to wrongdoing.

Judge Bruce granted the father's request and an Everett physician performed the operation. It was believed the boy showed signs of reforming, for his record from that time had been clear. However, the Malden police were called on a week or more ago to investigate the breaking into the Middlesex market, Main street, that city.

As a result of this break young Englishman once more was held. The operation for adenoids was recalled by Judge Bruce, and he said that in his opinion the operation did not entirely cure the boy and that the place for him was the Lyman School, where he ordered him removed.

ROOSEVELT ASKS VOTES FOR HINMAN

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 23.—Colonel Roosevelt today indorsed the candidacy of ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman for the gubernatorial nomination of the Republican primaries.

Colonel Roosevelt calls upon all good citizens to join in the support of a state ticket, the success of which would mean the overthrow of both Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy.

"I trust the Progressives at the primaries will stand shoulder to shoulder for clean non-partisan government with Republicans and Democrats, and save New York from the domination of Messrs. Barnes and Murphy," said Colonel Roosevelt in his statement.

"The essential thing is that the men nominated shall be men of the highest character and of proved efficiency, men whose entire records will bear the closest investigation, and who have the indomitable will necessary to do the work that must be done in Albany if the honest people of the state are to come to their own.

"Mr. Hinman is such a man."

Three Things Necessary in Treating Skin Diseases

Cuticura, the well-known remedy for eczema, pimples and other skin troubles, acts in three things. It stops the itching, it forms a light covering over the sore places on the skin, thus excluding air and water and it aids up the healing process. In a few days you can see and feel instantly improvement has begun. Cuticura is such a good remedy that a list of its ingredients is constantly printed and each box. People who buy a remedy are entitled to know what it is made of, so they can talk to their doctor about it if they desire. Secret remedies are going out of fashion, and Cuticura was among the first to print just what it is made of. Get a box of Cuticura Ointment and try it. The 25c size contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

ANOTHER AEROPLANE FLIGHT

More Cash Awards FOR AMERICAN READERS

On Saturday afternoon, July 25, weather permitting, or, in case of bad weather, on Sunday, Webster will make another startling flight in the great Burgess-Dunne seaplane. He will fly from Marblehead to Paragon Park, Nantasket, by way of Swampscott, Lynn Beach, Nahant, Bass Point, Revere Beach, Wollaston Beach, and Houghs Neck. He will make this trip without stop and as fast as he can.

Here is the way you can win another cash money award.

The airline distances between these points and all the available facts about the speed of the great flying machine are given in another column of this paper.

With these facts you can figure out with mathematical certainty how long it will take Webster to make the flight or any part of it.

Put down your careful estimate of the number of minutes and seconds Webster will take to fly from Marblehead to any of the given points in his route and also the time he will take from Marblehead to his landing on the water at Paragon Park, Nantasket.

The person sending in the nearest correct answer will

These Sunday American coupons, or copies of them, may be turned or sent in any time up to 6 P. M. Wednesday, July 29.

WATCH FOR MORE WEBSTER COUPONS NEXT SATURDAY

Boston has gone "air-mad" since the beginning of the AMERICAN'S beautiful series of aeroplane demonstrations. July 4, a quarter of a million people saw Webster at Revere. July 12, an almost equal number saw him at Nantasket. Last Sunday, three hundred thousand at Revere watched him circle and bank and climb.

And the announcement that next Saturday he will give a flight that will touch every shore resort and culminate squarely over Paragon has created wide-spread interest.

The flight Saturday will be marked by two contests, each with a capital award of $50 and many smaller awards for the successful contestants. Air-fans everywhere are preparing to enter both contests and go to Nantasket to witness the sensational climax of the flight.

The contests are two—a contest in estimating the time it will take Webster to fly between given points, and a contest to determine the altitude to which Webster ascends in his great climb over Paragon Park.

Tomorrow, Friday, will be printed a scale which was printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN, together with full details of how properly to estimate the altitude of the plane. Those who were at Revere last Sunday known how simple the whole thing was. It is only necessary to cut the scale from the AMERICAN, wait till the plane reaches its greatest altitude, sight over the top of the scale till the aeroplane in the sky is just in line with a tiny drawing of an aeroplane on the head of the scale, then mark where the horizon line comes on the scale.

The point where the horizon comes on the scale indicates the altitude of the plane. If the horizon comes two thirds of the way from "1,800 feet" to "1,900 feet," then the plane is 1,866 feet in the air.

GET SCALE TOMORROW.

This scale, with full instructions, will be printed tomorrow, Friday. Take it with you to Nantasket Saturday. Go in time for lunch in the Palm Garden in Paragon Park, or the Nantasket Hotel, or Richard's Hotel, or Coleman's Restaurant. Go, too, in time to visit the Old Mill and other amusement resorts. Take the scale with you, estimate the altitude, note it down.

In next Sunday's AMERICAN you will find a coupon on which to send in your estimate of the altitude. Or you may use a copy of this coupon. The estimate must be in the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop Square, before 6 p. m. the following Wednesday. And the best estimates will receive cash awards.

So if you want to enter the altitude contest, get next Sunday's AMERICAN.

Also, if you entered the altitude contest last Sunday at Revere, and sent in your estimate, as thousands did, in competition for the $250 in cash awards: YOU WILL FIND THE LIST OF WINNERS IN NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

There, it is doubly important that you get next Sunday's AMERICAN. And if two reasons are not enough, here is a third:

THE WINNERS IN THE SPEED-ESTIMATING CONTEST, ANSWERS IN WHICH MUST BE IN THE PROMOTION DEPARTMENT, NO. 5 WINTHROP SQUARE, BEFORE THREE O'CLOCK SATURDAY AFTERNOON, WILL ALSO BE ANNOUNCED IN NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

Now you have heard something about the altitude contest—in the air above Paragon Park at Nantasket, about four or half past four Saturday afternoon. But there is another and even more interesting contest that comes first. Thus there are two individual contests. The list of awards is the same in each contest. Here it is:

For the best estimate of time or altitude—$50.
For the second best—$25.
For the third best—$10.
For the fourth best—$5.
For the next ten—$2 each.
For the next fifteen—$1 each.

In the case of ties, the awards will be divided between the tied contestants.

Now for the explanation of the speed-estimating contest. Clifford Webster, in his Burgess-Dunne, will rise from the water at Marblehead about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. He will fly to Nantasket, passing over the following points: Marblehead, Swampscott, Lynn Beach, Nahant, Bass Point, Revere Beach, Wollaston Beach, Hough's Neck and Nantasket Beach.

FILL OUT COUPONS.

He will fly at top speed; and his plane is capable of something over sixty miles an hour. Your task is to estimate the time it will take him to fly:

1.—From Marblehead to Nantasket.
2.—From Marblehead to any one of the points named along his route.

You will find in this issue of the AMERICAN a coupon. When you have made your estimate, write it on this coupon or a copy of it, and send it, or bring it to the AMERICAN Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop Square.

Your estimates must be in the Promotion Department before 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, July 25, and the winners in that contest will be announced in Sunday's AMERICAN.

To estimate Webster's time of flight you need to know:

1—His speed.
2—The distance.
3.—The wind and its effect.

His speed is normally a little over sixty miles an hour. That is, normally a little over a mile a minute.

The distances involved are given in the table below. You must estimate the time it will take him to cover the whole distance, and also the time it will take him to cover any one of the shorter distances. Here are the distances, in an air line, and following the shortest possible line of flight which he can follow:

Marblehead to Swampscott—3½ miles.
Marblehead to Lynn Beach—5⅝ miles.
Marblehead to Nahant—8¼ miles.
Marblehead to Bass Point—10¼ miles.
Marblehead to Revere Beach—12½ miles.
Marblehead to Wollaston Beach—21 miles.
Marblehead to Hough's Neck—24 miles.
Marblehead to Nantasket—28⅝ miles.

MUST FIGURE WIND.

But, REMEMBER, when you are figuring the time it will take him to fly between given points, that these distances are air-line, and allow nothing for turns, detours, wind, or other circumstances. The actual flight will be about one fourth longer than the air line distance.

Third, you must figure the wind and its effect. The prevailing winds are east and northeast, according to the weather bureau. The average velocity is nine or ten miles an hour. You must allow for the wind in your estimates.

An easterly wind of ten miles an hour would on the whole flight add several minutes to Webster's time. For he would be flying dead against the wind for about eight miles, quartering against it for three miles, before the wind about four miles, and across the wind the rest of the time.

Remember to figure the wind in estimating the times of his flights. Figure out carefully how long you think it will take Webster to make his flights, then fill out the coupon in today's paper, or a copy of it, and send or bring it to the AMERICAN Promotion Department.

In Friday's AMERICAN, some of Webster's previous flight records will be printed to aid you in your estimates. But, remember, the estimates must be in before three o'clock Saturday, July 25. The flight will begin shortly after 3 p. m. Webster's own time will be taken as final for purposes of this contest. He will alight at Nantasket, then rise for an altitude flight over Paragon Park. The winners in last Sunday's altitude contest, and in this speed contest will be announced in Sunday's AMERICAN. In Sunday's AMERICAN also will be a coupon for use, if you wish, in sending in your estimate of his altitude in Saturday's flight over Paragon Park.

So send in your sped estimates. Go to Nantasket and lunch and see the sights. Estimate his altitude. Send in your estimates on a coupon from Sunday's AMERICAN or a copy of it, and may you win an award in each contest.

And if the weather prevents the flight Saturday, it will be held Sunday, under the same conditions.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

"The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

This foot powder, shaken in the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet is in line with the expressions heard daily for more than twenty years, in all parts of the world, from millions of people who are shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder for the feet, into their shoes, as the only practical and lasting treatment for easing and absolutely preventing sore feet. It can be obtained from dealers everywhere for 25c, or a trial package will be sent by mail free if you write to Allen S. Olmsted, Le Roy, N. Y.

Francesca Rotoli Makes Boston Debut

Francesca Rotoli, the daughter of the late Signor Rotoli, for years choir master at St. James, and one of the best-known singing teachers in Boston, will make her appearance at Keith's for the first time next week in the extraordinary cast of Boston favorites which will appear in a sketch called "Patsy." Miss Rotoli studied at the New England Conservatory.

Eleanor Gordon, who since her days in the Boston Theatre Stock, has had great success in "Kismet," Mrs. George A. Hibbard, wife of the former Mayor of Boston, and Wilson Melrose, the stock favorite, are all in the cast of this clever sketch by Franklyn Searight.

Shuman Says Curley Will Aid Hospital

President Shuman of the Boston City Hospital states that the communication sent to Mayor Curley in regard to the additional needs of the Boston City Hospital for the remainder of the fiscal year, does not in any way imply that the Mayor has refused to recommend the amount. On the contrary he has repeatedly intimated to the trustees that he will endeavor to make good the shortage.

EAGAN AND GLOVER BATTLE TEN ROUNDS TO A DRAW AT HALIFAX

DESIGNER SAYS DEFIANCE IS BADLY SAILED

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

The question asked by every yachtsman in the country, "What is the matter with the cup boat Defiance?" has been answered.

It has been answered emphatically too. And by the designer, George Owen of Newton.

Owen said today:

"The Defiance is all right if it is sailed."

WON'T DISCUSS FRICTION.

Owen won't have anything to say about friction aboard this New England boat, but he does admit that he hasn't been aboard or seen it race for a month or two.

He was sailing another yacht at Oyster Bay, L. I., while the Defiance was racing almost next door at Glen Cove, but Owen wasn't much interested.

Mr. Owen has the confidence of a large circle of yachtsmen and has a reputation of being one of the best all-around amateur skippers in the country.

With that reputation he hasn't been aiding his boat to any great extent, hence rumors of friction between the syndicate and the designer.

GENTLE HINT TO OWNERS.

Owen told me this:

The Defiance is all right. I know it. You can't sail a racing yacht by wearing white flannel pants and have somebody stand behind you whispering the sailing directions.

I have tried hard to convince the managing directors of the Defiance that Charles Francis Adams of Boston, skipper of the Resolute, can sail a good-sized racing craft with the best of them, but I never succeeded. His record with the Resolute, although, proves it.

These men behind the Defiance still believe that Adams can sail a small boat pretty well but when it comes to a boat the size of the three cup class boats, they say he is out of his game.

I know better, for I know Adams and his ability.

"What about the small sail plan now used on the Defiance?" I asked.

"It is all right and the boat has proved herself fast in several races. All it wants is a fair show."

"Will you take part in any more races aboard the Defiance?"

"I don't know," replied Owen.

QUEER CUSS.

The English gathered at the dock to gaze on Carpentier.
They looked on handsome Georges as an object wondrous queer.
For, though he is a heavyweight, the goldarn cuss can fight,
And that, in dear old England, is a most peculiar sight.

We fail to understand why the English were wild over Georges Carpentier when they have such fighters as Mrs. Pankhurst right in their midst.

Al Kaufman has come to the conclusion that he is through with the fight game, but everybody else knew it a long while ago.

Having dropped 100,000 regular dollars, Otto Stifel is beginning to believe the ancient wheeze that there is no money in baseball.

If the St. Louis Feds blow up, we wonder where the attendance will spend his afternoons.

IT HAS COME TO PASS.

We knew that he would do it, sure as Fate.
We've waited many a weary day and night
We've waited since that famous day and date
When Welsh and Ritchie fought their little fight.
Deep silence hovered over all the land,
A tense, expectant gratitude—and bing!
Bat Nelson took his fountain pen in hand
And threw his battered bonnet in the ring.

Mr. Nelson and Mr. Coulon both threaten to come back, showing that Ed Walsh's example has had an evil influence.

Charley Cutler has decided to get back into the wrestling game. And we were just beginning to think that he had reformed.

Johnny Coulon wants to meet Williams again, but says he prefers a shorter bout than the last one. Possibly Johnny wants a one-round bout.

Those cup defenders have been bothered by a lack of wind, but there is hope. Tom Jones is on his way East.

Georges Carpentier started fighting as a bantamweight and is now a heavy. If he had started out as a heavyweight he couldn't fit in a box car.

EAGAN-GLOVER IN DRAW BOUT AT HALIFAX

HALIFAX, N. S., July 23.—Joe Eagan and Johnny Glover, both of Boston, boxed fifteen rounds to a draw here, Eagan having the better of it in the first half of the battle and Glover in the second. The decision was popular.

Jimmy Walsh of New York went down before Willie Green of Boston in the tenth round on a decision.

There was some fairly good boxing up to the fourth round, but thereafter the bout was one-sided. Walsh's hugging was objectionable. Green gave a fine exhibition of footwork.

Kinch of the Royal Navy, Halifax, undefeated champion of the Mediterranean fleet, knocked out Taylor, a Halifax army man, in the fourth round.

At the Wanderers' Grounds the large crowd that attended saw one of the fiercest bouts ever boxed in Halifax, Young Clancy of Boston being awarded the decision at the end of the scheduled twelve rounds over Kid O'Neil of Halifax.

The men were at it hammer and tongs every minute. The decision was popular, as Clancy's cleverness appealed to the crowd.

Smith Hit Twice as Carpentier Fell

LONDON, July 23.—The pictures of the Smith-Carpentier fight in London, of which a private view has just been given, show that Smith struck Carpentier at least twice in the sixth round as Carpentier was in the act of falling.

BIG TEAM FOR BOSTON IN ARCHERY MEET

Plans have been made for a team of sixteen to represent Boston at the thirty-seventh annual tournament of the National Archery Association, which will be held August 18 to 22 at the Merion Cricket Club, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Bertram P. Gray is one of the women whose work bids fair to land a high mark. Secretary Louis Smith claims Mrs. Gray's scores have far surpassed any that have been recorded to date.

Another entry is Miss Dorothy Smith, who, although only ten years old at the time, placed sixth at the national meet at Soldiers Field last year.

Mrs. Louis Smith, mother of Dorothy, will again enter for the Columbian prize which she captured last year.

Among the notable male archers who will take the trip are George P. Bryant, national champion in 1912, and C. E. Dallin, the sculptor. Earl L. Ovington, the aviator, who took part in the championships last year, in all probability will enter.

Others who are expected to compete are Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Frentz, Mr. Bertram P. Gray, S. W. Wielder, C. T. Switzler, Miss Norma Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Peckham, Secretray Louis C. Smith and Ellis Spear.

Races for Cycle Cars.

A program of motor-cycle races is being arranged for August 8 at the Readville track. One of the features under consideration are cycle-car races. The miniature automobiles should be a great attraction.

OVER THE PLATE

By NICK FLATLEY

SMOKY JOE WOOD is ready to get going again. The speed marvel has had a lame wing ever since he won a ten-inning game down in Washington a few weeks ago. But the soreness has vanished. Doc Green is authority for the statement. Doc should know as he trains the Red Sox. He has been rubbing liniment on that million-dollar arm every day now for some time. His verdict was considered final, for yesterday Sir Joseph was out in the bullpen warming up on two or three occasions when things looked bad. All of which holds out hope for the future.

THE ARM, according to the eminent director of twisted muscles, went bad because Wood was forced to go through a hard, tight game with everything he had on tap, a few days before he had quite rounded into perfect trim. It was Friday, July 3, that Joe beat Boehling down in the capital after ten hectic innings. The next morning the whip was stiff. This may account for some of the reverses that have beset the Carrigan tribe lately. When Wood is right the whole team seem to follow along and bat and field up to snuff. When he's off, everybody suffers.

YOUNG GEORGE Foster, also, has recovered, though he only went through a couple of innings. It's so long since this sensational individual has performed on the mound that he was a bit rusty, but yesterday's baptism of fire did the goose-king a world of good and didn't hurt the team a bit. From now on he can be counted on for a regular appearance on the score card lists.

WHICH brings to mind the fact that it would be a great benefit to fans, scorers and the world in general if the spaces on cards used for pitcher's names were left vacant. It's only about once a week that the hurlers who get into type on the books are used. It would be much better for everybody to have good white paper on which to insert the right name and not be forced to scribble in over a bunch of possibilities.

* * *

OUR young friend, Harold Janvrin, sure looks to be out after the base-stealing record. He got away with three pilfers yesterday and a couple the day before. He is just beginning to learn how to use his great natural speed and with a little more improvement will be one of the most dangerous men on the paths in the game. Janny is also finding the knack of breaking away from the plate on the loop, as three successful bunts yesterday showed. All this made up for a couple of bones he pulled during yesterday's two games. One of them, however, really proved advantageous as Mr. Shotten accommodatingly dropped a fly and let Harold score when he should have been doubled up.

THOUGH they should have scored at least twice as many times as they did in the two contests, the Sox, nevertheless, had more ginger than has been in evidence for some time. They pulled off a squeeze play, escaped the hidden ball trick twice and took perfect advantage of the shaky condition of the Brown infield.

* * *

IT NOW develops that every player on the Red Sox team, excepting the three Baltimore recruits, Shore, Ruth and Egan, who haven't had time to join, belonged to the Baseball Players Fraternity. Also, they were ready to follow the dictates of Pesident Fultz. As the same story comes in from practically every big league city in the country, no doubt Byron Bombast Johnson and Charles Dedication Ebbetts knew just about what they were doing when they swallowed a little pride the other day. As they might say, Kraft goeth before a fall.

HERE'S more trouble for organized ball. In New York State, under the new Workingmen's Compensation Law, ballplayers are laborers and consequently have to be insured by the club owners. Not only clubs resident in New York State, but every team that plays in the State comes under the ruling. As the rates are regulated according to the salaries paid, the high-priced stars will prove another sort of an addd burden. Poor magnates.

* * *

A FIFTEEN thousand crowd to watch the Browns, even in a double-header, shows that the outside chance the Sox have to grab off the flag has the faithful on edge. Perhaps it was the great gathering that put a lot of pep into the Sox. It helps to get a big hand every time you do anything. Speaker, who seems the old Spoke at last, sure gave the mob a great performance of baseball as it should be played for $18,000 more or less a year. He had a lot of close seconds, too. Prominent among them was our old, or rather new, friend Hobby, who, unless all signs fail, is due to make the biggest hit around the initial hassock that any Red Sox has registered since the far-off days of Candy LaChance.

DIDIER WINS 25-MILE PACED RACE AT BEACH

Leon Didier was the winner of the twenty-five-mile motor-paced race at the Revere track over George Wiley and Clarence Carman.

Wiley and Carman had trouble with their motors, which made the going for the Frenchman easy. His time was 34m. 1 1-5s., the fastest of the season.

Carman and Wiley were in fine form. Carman set a whirlwind pace for five miles and Didier was unable to take his usual position in front. On the fifth mile he lost more than two laps while riding unpaced.

The accident to Carman put Didier in front. Wiley was trailing the Frenchman and both were flying. On the tenth mile the tire on Wiley's motorcycle burst and it put him out of the contest. He tried a relief machine, but it was without speed and he was called from the track.

Didier had things his own way from that point, Carman being far behind as a result of the early accident.

By FRED HOEY.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, champion [tennis] player of this country, and [Thomas] C. Bundy of Los Angeles, [his] doubles partner and runner-up [in the] W. A. Larned at Newport in 1910, will figure in the feature singles match at the Longwood Cricket Club today.

McLoughlin and Bundy have been tennis pals for seven years and the fact that these two men with their peculiar service are thrown together in the fifth round of the Longwood Challenge Bowl tourney creates considerable interest.

Bundy is an older player than the champion and the match should produce some of the liveliest court work of the tournament. They understand each other's game and if there are any weak points in either's defence they will have an[y] [illegible] show them to the [illegible]

"NOW I wonder whether they asked me to pick the prettiest baby as a compliment to my good taste or my courage?" puzzled Kitty at the Baby Show.

"They are all such perfect little dears with their rosebud mouths, their fascinating little curly pates, and their great innocent eyes peeping out from under their wonderful long lashes! If I had my way every one should have a blue ribbon, for they are all too pretty to be slighted."

"Oh, my gracious!" Kitty exclaimed as she suddenly came to one little rascal, that was far from pretty. "You must be the very homeliest baby on earth! But you're mighty cute, and I suppose your mother thinks you are the most beautiful child living, or she wouldn't have had the nerve to bring you to this show! Wouldn't it be a great joke if I gave you the blue ribbon? I'm just going to do it!"

"That little fright more beautiful than my darling!" screamed one mother. And in a second all the indignant women flew at Kitty, who beat a very hasty if undignified retreat, with the ladies following closely at her heels.

Safely perched on the limb of a tree, Kitty turned a deaf ear on the commands of the irate crowd to come down and explain her decision. "Being up a tree is not half so bad as it might be," chuckled Kitty.

Tom Morton Tries to See Mrs. Price and Finds That He Will Be Late at His Engagement Dinner

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER VII.

"MRS. PRICE is not at home, sir."

The maid who opened the door for Tom Morton said the words politely, but with a look of ill-concealed curiosity. The man who had rung the bell was aware that this was an unconventionally early hour for a social call, and understood the maid's interrogative expression of countenance.

"Not at home?" he repeated. "I am sorry. I want to see her on an important matter of business."

He was wondering if the girl's answer to his question had not been the one uttered by the servants of society women who wish to indicate that they are not caring to receive callers. He did not like to seem too persevering, but if he would be at Homewood tonight by 7 o'clock he must take an early afternoon train from Baltimore. So he put another question to the maid:

"Can you tell me when Mrs. Price will be in? Would I be likely to find her later in the morning?"

"I don't know, sir. Her sister's visiting her, and the two of them's gone out somewhere for the morning, and maybe for luncheon. Couldn't you leave your message with me? I'll give it to Mrs. Price as soon as she comes in."

"I'm afraid not," the man regretted. He could not give this girl his name lest her mistress' husband should hear of it and suspect that Ralph had been communicating with her. Ralph had warned him especially against doing anything that would arouse the jealous husband's suspicions. Then a happy thought struck him.

"If"—he hesitated—"you can give me an envelope, I will write a line on my card and leave it for Mrs. Price."

Whilst the maid hurried off to fulfil his request Tom drew his visiting card from his pocket and wrote on it the name of the hotel at which he was stopping. He would enclose it in an envelope and seal this. He disliked to do it, yet what other course could he pursue? Mrs. Price might understand what his errand was and call him up upon her return.

"You think Mrs. Price will be back soon after luncheon, don't you?" he asked when the maid returned with the envelope.

"I don't know, I'm sure, sir," answered the girl. There was nothing to be gained by questioning her and he handed her his enclosed card with a brief—"Please see that she gets this as soon as possible."

A LONG MORNING

He had a long morning ahead of him and he was at a loss as to what to do with it. It was a perfect day, and Baltimore, in Springtime, would delight the heart of any lover of that beautiful city. Nothing would have pleased Tom Morton more than to walk here today with Edith Hale; but he was too anxious to get back to her to be allured by the prospect of a solitary promenade. Moreover, Mrs. Price might return and call him up at the hotel during his absence.

So, after an hour's stroll, during which he paused for a moment at the grave of Edgar Allan Poe to think of the genius of the poet and of his tragically sad life, he returned to the Hotel Belvidere and asked anxiously at the office if any message had come for him. The polite clerk answered in the negative with a regretful manner that somehow comforted the stranger.

Buying several papers and magazines, Tom went into the reading-room and tried to forget his uneasiness, although he found it hard to fix his mind up on the daily news or the short stories and special articles which he attempted to peruse.

But the longest morning will wear itself away at last. It was almost 1 o'clock when he went into the corridor, where the telephone booths were located, and looked up in the directory the number of Mrs. Price's house. A servant's voice answered his call.

"No, sir, Mrs. Price isn't home yet," she replied to his query. "But she's telephoned that she'll be in about 2 o'clock."

Two o'clock! Could he deliver the money to her and yet catch a train to New York that would get him out to Homewood before it was too late? He hesitated for a moment, then the thought of Edith made him take a chance.

"I left a card with you this morning, you remember?" he said.

He thought he had recognized the voice of the girl whom he had seen earlier in the day.

"Yes, sir, you did," she replied.

"As soon as Mrs. Price returns give her that card and ask her to call me up immediately. Understand?"

"Yes, sir—or"—with a little catch in her voice, "Mr. Price may be home before her. Will I give him the message?"

"No, don't bother him about it," Morton returned quickly. Price might be at home! If so, how could Morton see her without running the chance of meeting her husband? The New Yorker hung up the receiver with an impatient exclamation. He hated intrigue—despised it with all the disgust of a clean, straightforward, honest man. To think that he should be involved in such a mess as this!

A TELEPHONE CALL

Repairing to the dining room he tried to eat some luncheon, but even the Maryland fried chicken failed to tempt him. Again and again he looked at his watch. It was 2 o'clock when a page came through the rooms calling his name, and he responded eagerly.

"Someone for you on the phone," the boy said.

It was a woman's voice that replied to his "Hello!" and the voice was so unsteady that Tom knew the speaker was agitated.

"You are Mr. Morton—Ralph's brother?" she asked.

"I am Ralph's cousin," Tom said briefly. "I have something here which he asked me to deliver to you."

"Oh—thank Heaven!" she breathed. "Do not bring it until after 3 o'clock, no earlier," she added hastily in a low tone. "Be sure not to come until then. Bring it yourself. Don't trust it to anyone else—for the servants and messengers may be watched. But by quarter past three I will be alone. Good-bye!"

Quarter past three! Then, no matter how much he hurried, he could not catch a train that would get him into New York before 8 o'clock!

(To Be Continued.)

His One Mistake

Jim Crook, who, by the way, traveled incognito—sometimes as a Russian prince, sometimes as an Italian count, occasionally as a German baron—spent most of his life crossing the Atlantic from New York to Liverpool.

By profession he was a card sharper, and he found the big ocean liners an admirable hunting ground, for he was a man of considerable charm of manner and had an extraordinary knack of establishing himself in the good graces of distinguished fellow-travelers.

Once he made a mistake.

"I should like very much to hear one of your sermons, sir," he remarked to an eminent clergyman whose acquaintance he had made on the first day out of New York.

"Well," replied the parson, who was no mean judge of character, "you ought to have heard me last Sunday."

"Ought to have heard you? Was it an exceptionally good sermon?"

"Oh, no! But I was preaching in the chapel at Sing Sing Prison!"

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

PROFESSUR ROBO & his wife calm up to the house last nite to call, thay are friends of Ma's, she met Missus Robo at the Sisters of Song Club & she asked them to cum up to the house for dinner.

It was awful hot wen thay got to the house & Pa was kicking about the heat. Pa ways neerly 340 pounds & he feels the heet.

I never feel warm in the Summer, sed Professur Robo. I manage to feel cumfortabel all the time, Winter or Summer. He was a littel thin man that cuddent have wayed oaver 100 pounds. He looked nice & cool & so did everybody excep Pa. This feeling the heet is only a matter of imaginashun, he sed.

Indeed, sed Pa, then I suppose that I am only sykologickally hot, is that it? & I suppose that my collar only imagines that it is wilted & run down. I can't see anything imaginary about the way I feel at this moment, sed Pa. Maybe if you wayed over twice as much as you do now, you wud feel the heet moar, he sed to the Professur.

That doesn't make any differns, I guess, sed Mister Robo. The trubbel with peepul that feel the heet is that they are not careful what thay eet & drink. I have set rules for my diet in the hot wethur, he sed, & my wife has the saim rules. So we get along fine & always feel cool. For instens, he sed to Pa, in the Summer time I nevver think of eating chili con-carny or tabasko.

Neither do I, sed Pa.

& in the second place, he sed, I hardly evver drink pure alcohol during the dog days. I always diloot it, usually with water.

The saim here, sed Pa, & yet I feel hot jest the saim.

But I feer you diloot a grate deal moar of it in a day than Professur Robo, sed Ma.

My husband is a vary temperate man, sed Missus Robo. I see to that. Wen we were first married he calm hoam one night singing Darling I Am Growing Old, she sed, & I guess he made up his mind by the time I was thru with him that he was nevver cut out to be a drinking man or a abusive husband, sed Missus Robo.

You must not get yure temper up, deer, sed the Professur, that is one of our rules for keeping cool. & another thing I nevver do in warm wether, he sed to Pa, is to drink too much icewater after I have reetired for the nite. I figger that if one drinks plenty of icewater all day, the stummick needs a little rest at nite. & I keep as far away as I can from boilers & facktory furnaces, he sed.

Well, sed Pa, I have tried about the saim general rules all my life, but that doesn't change the fact that wen the warm wether cums I feel it. However, Mister Hobo, I suppose yure rules are as sensibel as any man's rules for keeping cool in hot wether.

Robo, not Hobo, sed the Professur. If you mis-pronounce my naim that way aggenn, I will get hot myself.

After thay was gone Pa beegan to laff. Thare are sum queer nuts in this wurruld, he sed.

For instens, sed Ma.

Well, sed Pa, for instens, Professur Hobo.

Apropos

"How do you do?" said the crab to the lobster. "How is your dear little baby?"

"Very well, indeed," said the lobster. "We haven't named her yet; names are so hard to find."

"Why not call her 'Clawdia?'" suggested the crab.

New Home Treatment for Banishing Hairs

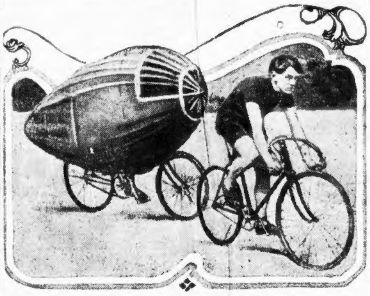

(Beauty Topics)

With the aid of a delatone paste, it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about 2 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.

The Mysteries of Science

WHICH OF THESE BICYCLISTS WILL WIN?

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

A DISCOVERY is always a surprise. If it were not so there could be no discoveries. Often the surprise is of such a nature that it appears to contradict principles believed to be firmly established. This is true of the new form of racing bicycle invented by E. Bunau-Varilla, and of the apparatus of similar form that I have before briefly described, with which a French army sergeant has recently been experimenting in the hope of achieving flight by the power of human muscles alone.

To appreciate how surprising is the discovery on which the inventions mentioned rest, look at the bicycle, and remember that it is intended to move big end ahead. But a modern rifle bullet or artillery projectile, has its pointed end ahead. Also the hull of a ship is sharper and narrower at the bow than at the stern.

And this seems perfectly natural. One would say, of course, a body intended to cleave its way through water or air ought to be pointed in front.

This is true enough of a projectile penetrating a target. A bullet with a pointed head will go deeper into a log of wood than a round bullet. But a body passing through air or water is subject to different forces.

Here is a fact that nature held before us continually without our clearly comprehending it until recent experimental studies made it plain. The shape of a fish was one of the plainest hints that nature gave. The fish is comparatively blunt in front and pointed behind. Mr. Bunau-Varilla put his bicyclist inside a light, stiff case, resembling the body of a fish, and, thus enclosed, he left the ordinary racers on wheels behind, and easily beat their best records.

But the principle on which this new form of vehicle is based was not fully understood until it had been experimentally worked out.

The direct resistance of the air to the projectile passing through it blunt end first, has less retarding influence than the backward suction of the vacuum formed behind the projectile moving sharp end first. And to this is added the accelerating force of the air currents pressing on the sloping sides of the projectile that has its pointed end at the rear.

The surprising result is that so much is gained by the reaction of the air currents that a bicycle rider enclosed in a case like that shown encounters less resistance from the air than one who rides in the ordinary fashion.

No Lesson Wanted

Mr. Sharp was a solicitor, and he had in his office a boy who, unfortunately, was given to telling the boys in other offices what happened in his.

This state of affairs could not, of course, be allowed to continue. Sharp felt compelled to dismiss the lad, but when doing so decided to give him some wise counsel, hoping thereby to save him from a similar fault in the future.

"Smith," he said, "you must remember never to hear anything that is said in an office. Do what you're told, but turn a deaf ear to conversation which does not concern you."

The lawyer was suddenly and happily inspired. It would do no harm, he thought, to teach the selfsame lesson to his typist. So, turning to that young lady, he remarked:

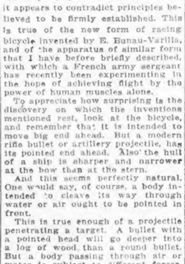

"Miss Brown, did you hear what I've just said to Smith"

"No, Mr. Sharp," came Miss Brown's prompt reply.

Her Unwilling Victim

Young Wife (just home from the cooking school)—I feel so encouraged! I was complimented on my progress today. But poor Miss Smith! I am really sorry for her. She tries hard, but she doesn't seem to get on at all.

Young Husband—You must remember that Miss Smith has no one to practice on.

Mlle. Marthe Regnier of the Theatre de la Renaissance, Paris, says: "I am happy to say that the more I use Savon Cadum, the better I like it."

The best soaps are made in France, and the soap that enjoys the greatest sale is Savon Cadum, the great French Complexion soap. It costs 50c. a cake, which price enables the maker to use the very best materials. At dept. and drug stores, 50c. a cake.

The Bashful Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"I AM a young man who has not had much dealing with women and never cared for the company of a girl until recently, when I met a young lady for whom I have a great liking. I meet her when I am in the company of another young man.

"No sooner do we meet than I seem to lose all power of speech. I cannot say what I want to convey. She seems to understand me and acts pleasant and encouraging. I have never asked her to accompany me to any places of amusement for fear that I might not treat her properly. Furthermore, I would not know where to take her, as I've never gone out with girls," writes Henri G——.

I suppose it would do no good to tell you, Henri, that in these days of bold young men who think they honor a girl by speaking to her, your modesty and shyness have a real charm of their own.

What you want to know is how to campaign for the affections of the girl you admire. You don't want to be tongue-tied in her presence lest she think you a bore. You are unwilling to risk having her girlish sympathy come out to your shyness for fear she will pity and despise you, when all your masculine instinct is for conquering and winning admiration.

Suppose you ask her to go with you to a ball game! Most men understand baseball and not very many women do. In explaining the points of the game you can act as her instructor and guide and thereby you will gain confidence in yourself.

You may ask her to the theatre, to go to some moving picture, or to take a trip to Revere Beach or any amusement park you like. If you go where you have a chance for physical exertion—as rowing or canoeing—you will have some definite responsibility to take your mind off yourself and your own shyness.

The bashful young man who is quite at a loss when he is paying a formal call in a girl's home will find himself perfectly at ease when busy at something more than the conscious game of society.

Occupy yourself at some familiar or congenial pursuit, and ask the girl you like to share it with you.

Don't struggle to make conversation—do something, if it is only taking a walk or going to the corner for a soda or taking a street car ride. Discuss what you see going on around you as you would with a favorite boy companion or a dear relative. Stop thinking of yourself and devote yourself to giving pleasure to the friend you are trying to win.

Friendship consists of almost equal parts of liking the same thing and liking each other. Find a congenial pastime that pleases you both and out of your common interest a real friendship will flower.

All men who are shy have a certain modesty that the brazen lady-killer lacks. And, so, don't grieve over your inexperience. Just be your natural boyish self and rest assured that if the girl you like is fine and wholesome your unselfish devotion will win her.

Give Fels-Naptha Soap a chance to do the hard part of your work for you and it will save your health and strength. It will relieve you of hard rubbing and scrubbing. It dissolves grease and makes dirt disappear. It saves coal or gas, because you do not need hot water. Works perfectly in cool or lukewarm water.

Just as wonderful for housecleaning, dishwashing, or anything for which you use soap and water, as it is for washing clothes. Try Fels-Naptha Soap in cool or lukewarm water, and see how easy the "Fels-Naptha Way" of doing things is.

Washes woolens without shrinking or hardening them. Does not hurt delicate materials, nor fade colors.

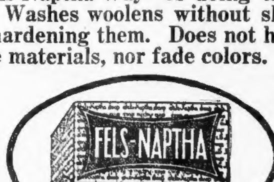

Anty Drudge Tells Willie the Right Kind of Soap to Buy

Willie Weary—"Ma, here's Anty Drudge. I met her on the way to the store to get your soap and she made me buy a new kind. She's come to tell you about it."

Anty Drudge—"Howdye'do, Mrs. Weary. I'm to blame if Willie did wrong, but I thought you had never heard of Fels-Naptha Soap, or you wouldn't be buying any other kind. And if you never heard of it, it's time you did. So I just came along with Willie to tell you some things you'll be glad to know."

Follow the directions on the Red and Green Wrapper.

Better buy Fels-Naptha by the carton or box.

FELS & CO., PHILADELPHIA

U. S. SUIT AGAINST NEW HAVEN R. R. IS FILED IN NEW YORK

The bill also sets out at great length the history of the steamboat lines to and from New England, the various methods claimed to have been resorted to by the New Haven to acquire or destroy the independent lines and the absorption of wharves and water terminals at various New England ports.

This portion of the bill contains an historical statement of the multitude of transactions resulting in the acquisition of trolley lines and the methods employed by the New Haven in securing these and preventing the construction of others.

POWER MONOPOLY.

The government particularly points out the devices employed by the New Haven in its attempt to segregate within each State the portion of these lines lying within the State so as to give such portion the appearance of being engaged exclusively in intra-State business.

It likewise charges the monopolization by the New Haven of power companies furnishing power to the various trolley lines within the State of Connecticut.

The bill concludes with a prayer to the court to adjudge the acts charged to be in violation of the Sherman act and to enjoin the New Haven and its representatives from further carrying out or maintaining these acts.

Among the specific remedies asked is that the New Haven be compelled to sell to persons not its stockholders or agents or otherwise under its control and influence, all its interests in steamboat and trolley lines, in the Boston & Maine Railroad, in the Rutland Railroad, in the New England Railroad and in all the wharves and water terminals acquired by it, and that it be enjoined from thereafter holding such interests and that the partnership contract between the New York Central and the New Haven for the operation of the Boston & Albany Railroad be cancelled. There is also a prayer for general relief.

MANY DEFENDANTS NAMED.

The personal defendants named in the suit against the New Haven are: William Rockefeller, John T. Pratt and George F. Baker of New York, Charles F. Brooker of Ansonia, Ct.; William Skinner of Holyoke, Mass.; D. Newton Barney of Farmington, Ct.; Robert W. Taft of Providence, R. I.; James S. Elton of Waterbury, Ct.; James S. Hemingway, Heaton Robinson, Frederick F. Brewster, Howard Elliott, Arthur T. Hadley and James H. Hustis of New Haven, Ct.; Samuel Rea and T. DeWitt Cuyler of Philadelphia, Henry K. McHarg of Stamford, Ct.; John L. Billard of Meriden, Ct.; Morton E. Plant of Groton, Ct.; Edward Milligan of Hartford, Ct.; Francis T. Maxwell of Rockville, Ct.; James T. Richards of Newtonville, Mass., and W. Murray Crane of Dalton, Mass.

"All the above named individuals," states the bill, "are directors of the New Haven Company. Elliott is chairman of its board of directors and executive thereof and Hustis its president."

The bill goes into great detail with respect to the various operations of the New Haven whereby that road gained control of practically all the transportation system of New England. Charles S. Mellen, formerly president of the New Haven, is named in nearly all these transactions with the qualifying statement that he acted "under the direction o fthe board of directors."

N. H. CHARGES BAD FAITH IN BAY STATE

The New Haven directors have decided to fight the government to a finish in i's suit to force the road to sell its Boston & Maine stock.

The New Haven board denies President Wilson's allegations that it is not prepared to live up to the agreement. The board claims that the terms were changed entirely by the Massachusetts law, providing that each certificate bear a stamp, stating that the State has the right at any time to buy stock "at the fair value thereof, in accordance with law."

President James H. Hustis, after an all-day conference with attorneys of the road at New York, issued a statement, which said in part:

The directors of the New Haven Railroad desire to make their position entirely clear. They have never refused, but, on the contrary, have always been willing and anxious to carry out the agreement with the Attorney-General, made on March 21, 1914, approved by the stockholders on April 21, and sanctioned by the Governor of Massachuse'ts.

CHANGE WOULD ENTAIL LOSS.

That agreement was framed to accomplish two objects:

First, the sale of certain properties owned by the company, which the Attorney-General demanded, and, second, the sale to take place at such times and on such terms as would insure a fair price. This last object, in the judgment of the directors, will be defeated if the sale of the Boston & Maine stock is made subject to the condition imposed by the Legislature of Massachuset's; therefore, they have declined to accept it.

They have not refused to carry out any agreement, but they have refused to change that agreement, as the change would entail a very large pecuniary loss, and at the same time increase enormously the difficulty of reorganizing the Boston & Maine Railroad.

OFFER TO GOVERNMENT.

As evidence of good faith, a representative committee, consisting of President Hustis, Mr. Cuyler and Dr. Hadley, accompanied by Mr. Moorfield Storey, counsel, waited on the Attorney-General on July 20, and offered to carry through the settlement according to the agreement.

Further, in order to meet the difficulty created by the Massachusetts Legislature, the committee offered to place control of the Boston Holding Company in the hands of the trustees, selected by the Attorney-General, and the Governor of Massachusetts, with full power to absolutely control the Boston & Maine Railroad until either the Massachusetts Legislature passed the necessary legislation, or the rights of the parties interested were decided by the Federal Court in proceedings which the company offered to expedite in every way possible.

CAN'T SACRIFICE B. & M.

The New Haven committee did everything possible to avoid hostile proceedings without sacrificing the interests of their shareholders, and the directors only regret that an offer which seems to them eminently fair should not have been accepted. Yet they cannot but feel a strong hope that a way may be found to accomplish the dissolution which the Attorney-General desires and which the company is willing to accept on terms which do not inflict on the shareholders a serious loss.

You authorized your directors to compromise the questions pending between the United States and the company upon the basis set forth by the Attorney-General on March 21, and submitted to you and approved by you at a special meeting on April 21 last.

The committee assured the Attorney-General of the company's desire to carry out the compromise agreement of March 21 in all respects, but that they could not consent to sacrifice so important and valuable an asset as the Boston & Maine stock, worth, in their judgment, far more than its present market value would indicate, and sorely needed to help to pay the present debts of the company.

Wilson Not to Attend Cape Canal Opening

WASHINGTON, July 23.—President Wilson has written Thomas F. Kelleher of Sandwich, Mass., declining an invitation to the opening of the Cape Cod Canal Saturday. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt will be present and probably some other officials will attend. The Navy Department will send several ships to the canal opening.

BOSTON AMERICAN

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were around their low for the day by afternoon. New York declines including Canadian Pacific 1⅞, Southern Pacific ⅝, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading 1½, Lehigh Valley 1⅝, New Haven ½, American Telephone ¼, American Can ⅝, Steel ¾, Amalgamated ½, American Smelting ½, Northern Pacific ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio ¾, Union Pacific ¾, New York Central ⅝ and Chesapeake & Ohio 1.

New Haven was off ½ in Boston and Boston & Maine was unchanged, as were United Fruit and American Telephone. Elevated was ½ lower. Declines for mines included Greene-Cananea ⅜, Butte & Superior ½, Calumet & Arizona ⅝, Granby ⅜, and North Butte ¼.

STOCKS OPENED LOWER.

When the New York market opened prices were on a slightly lower level and the trend was downward, when there was any change, throughout the morning. Trading was quiet. Most of the forenoon business was transacted during the first few minutes. At times stagnation prevailed. The declines did not average large and reflected suspense as much as anything. Everybody is waiting for the Eastern rate case decision. First hour transactions totalled about 70,000 shares.

Americans had been lower in London, especially Erie first preferred and Union Pacific. Canadian Pacific continued to be heavy in that market, which was affected by the failure of the conference on the Ulster situation. Reports from the continent did not indicate much change at Paris or Berlin.

FREIGHT CAR SURPLUS.

Sentiment was adversely affected by the report that the net surplus of idle cars in the United States and Canada had increased nearly 7,000 during the first fortnight in July. On July 15, according to the bulletin of the American Railway Association, there was a net surplus of 226,541, compared with 219,545 on July 1. Statements that trade had generally improved led many to expect a decrease, as was reported in the last half for the first and the last fortnights of June.

It is said that the increase in the price of steel products is not wholly due to a large volume of orders. In the minds of many there is a question how long the advance will be maintained, if business does not pick up. Railroads are now placing their rail orders for the balance of the year and car buying is about over. It is questioned if the rate decision, even if favorable to roads, will help the steel industry much for a while. Most all railroad managements propose to do as little buying as possible. A 5 per cent. increase in freight rates will not warrant any prodigality on their part.

SITUATION AT WASHINGTON.

No change in the situation at Washington is reported. The administration trust bills are now before the Senate, but it is believed that it will take weeks to get either of them to a vote. The chief hope in financial circles is that they will be materially modified.

Regarding the status of Messrs. Jones and Warburg, candidates for the Federal Reserve Board, the situation remains about the same. One statement from the capital which came today says that up to this morning Mr. Warburg had not agreed to appear before the Senate Banking Committee.

WEAK AT MIDDAY.

The market was still weak at midday, with Lehigh Valley, Reading and Chesapeake & Ohio among those to show the largest losses. New Haven was steady when news came that a suit in equity had been filed in New York on behalf of the Department of Justice to force dissolution of the system.

It is alleged by the government in its complaint that the New Haven Company has violated the Sherman law in various ways by restraining trade and commerce to, from and among the New England States and has acquired monopoly of railroad and water transportation to, from and among those States and of trolley transportation in Connecticut, Rhode Island, southern and central Massachusetts and extreme southeastern portion of the State of New York and of all three classes of such transportation within that territory.

MORE GOLD FOR EUROPE.

It was announced that the National City Bank of New York would ship $2,500,000 in gold to Europe tomorrow, but the renewal of exportation did not influence stocks appreciable. The gold is for Paris, it is understood. The Bank of France reports for the past week that its stock increased 11,700,000 francs.

Bears subjected the market to considerable pressure during the morning, and later, but did not succeed in forcing out much stock.

In Boston trading was quiet all day. The tone at the start was steady, and on the whole the local list was stronger than the one in New York. But speculation was without feature here, and investment demand at a low ebb. Coppers were quiet. It is said that small dealers sold electrolytic in London today around 13½ cents a pound.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

During the fiscal year ended June 30 postal savings deposits in Boston amounted to $1,100,000.

At noon in the London copper warrants market spot was off 6s. 3d. and futures 7s. 6d. At the close both were 1s. 3d. higher.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged at 3 per cent. Its proportion of reserve to liabilities was 52.40 per cent., compared with 53.69 at the corresponding time last year.

In June the Utah Copper Company produced 13,268,106 pounds, against 13,616,953 in May and 11,637,947 in June a year ago.

The combined net earnings available for dividends of the Massachusetts Gas Companies 'subsidiaries for June were $230,363, a decrease of $26,463, or 14.20 per cent., compared with the corresponding 1913 month. For the fiscal year ended by June net earnings were $2,525,043, compared with $2,604,847 in the previous year.

John J. Martin Urges Commercial Drydock

The construction of a commercial drydock at Boston, as proposed by a majority of the late board of port directors, is urged by John J. Martin, president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, in a communication addressed to the Governor and Council.

Mr. Martin says that if this port is to be made attractive to ship owners and to the commercial interests of the world generally, we imperatively need a drydock equipped with modern facilities and appliances, sufficient in size for the accommodation of any modern ocean steamship.

Would You Like to Have a Prince--or a "Boston Bull"?

You Can Buy Either if You Have Enough Money.

Copyright, 1914, by Star Company.

The charming young woman in this picture—one of the daughters of the American noble race of Standard Oil—has just been married to an Italian prince. His race, it is said, goes back to the fourteenth century. But Standard Oil goes back to the carboniferous era, which began a great many million years ago, and lasted at least several million years. Therefore, Standard Oil can hold its own against any European family for age.

The oldest European noble family of undoubted lineage—according to Voltaire, usually accurate—was a Venetian family, descendant of one of the brigands that established the city of Venice when they went to live out in the swamps and keep away from the police.

European nobility is young indeed compared with Standard Oil nobility. And when it comes to descending from brigands, we have American families that can compete fairly with anybody that ever lived in Venice.

Is it not interesting to find the oil that gushes from the earth so ancient, rich and oozy, buying everything from Boston bulldogs to European titles?

And how wise the young lady with the money who buys the Boston bulldog and stops there—leaving the prince unbought on his bench in the show.

A Boston bulldog keeps his bargain. He barks gratefully when you give him something, does not run away deliberately, making himself the pet of a Russian dancer and forgetting that he ought to be YOUR pet, bought and paid for.

Does any American lady spend the evenings sighing because she is not a princess?

She need not sigh. It is only a question of money.

Save up and buy a Boston bulldog, name him "Prince," tie a collar around his neck and call it the "garter" or the "golden fleece"—and you will be happier than most of the American girls whose fathers' foolish money buys titles for them.

Life Imprisonment for Those with Dynamite in Their Possession

If They Cannot Explain WHY They Have It

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

If a man has in his possession dynamite or any other high explosive, intending to use it in a legitimate way, he can easily PROVE his intention.

If HE cannot prove that he has the dynamite for legitimate uses, the law should take it for granted that he is planning murder, and sentence him without further evidence to twenty years' imprisonment.

A law of this character was passed in England, after one of the most disastrous explosions—and it proved extremely effective. When the mere possession of dynamite without a permit involves going to jail, dynamite activity diminishes.

The criminal, planning to use dynamite, endangers the life that he threatens and other lives.

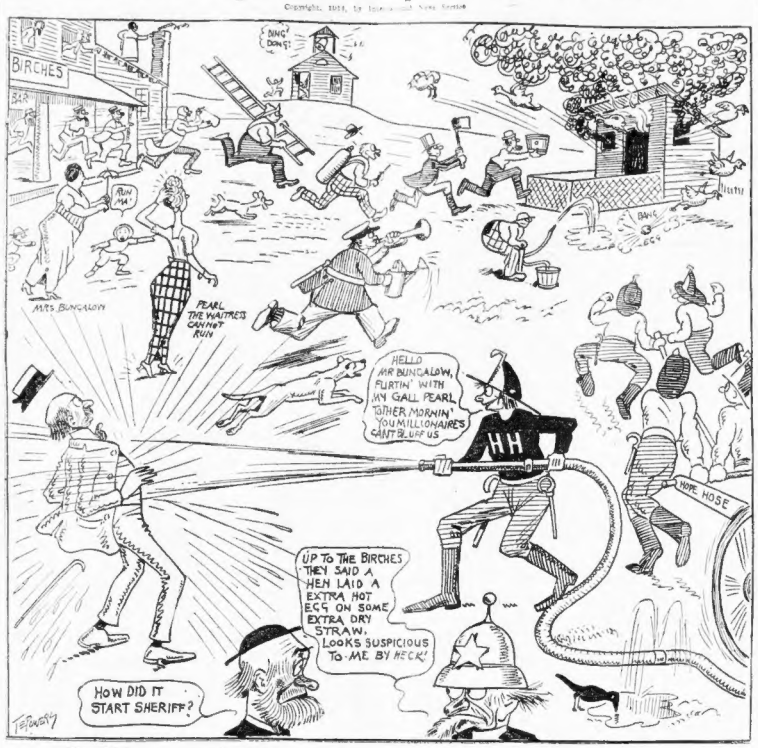

The fact that he possesses the dyanmite is PROOF THAT HE HAS PLANNED MURDER. And a man who has planned murder should be sent to jail for twenty years or longer.

His accomplices in securing the dynamite and hiding it should have appropriate terms in prison.

In connection with this law, there should be kept standing a conspicuous reward for evidence leading to convictions under the law. With such a law and such a reward, gentlemen who feel it their duty to reform the world over night would leave dynamite and other explosives out of their plans.

Why Waste Time on Calculations?

Metric System Makes Arithmetic Mere Play

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

ONE of the greatest fights in the world, one that goes on and on, and shows no sign of ending, for that is as ridiculous as it is true, is the struggle between the adherents of the Metric system of weights and measures and those who uphold the old British system, which has been discarded by every scientific body in the world.

I see by the English scientific journals that another not period in this fight has just occurred, leaving each party as determined as ever.

It is amazing what endless trouble men will give themselves rather than break some broken-covered tradition that has become an incubus upon them without their recognizing the fact. People will fight for the old moss-back as if it were their god. These things excite fiercer candor than money, exhaust patience and use up brainforce for nothing.

Let us look at a few facts in the case. There is no doubt that the bitter opposition to the universal use of the Metric system in Great Britain (and our inheritance of prejudices of this kind is not yet exhausted) is largely based upon the fact that the system took its shape in France, and was set upon its feet there, during the revolutionary epoch. The mere names "French Revolution" and "Napoleon" are always a red rag to the British bull.

Nevertheless it appears that the suggestion out of which the Metric system grew was born from an English brain. It is said to have been first offered by James Watt in 1783, in letters which he wrote to French savants and others urging the adoption of an international unit of weights and measures for the especial use of scientific men who found themselves wasting a great deal of time in turning their calculations from one system into another. The idea was taken up in France and pushed by the government, and France had the honor of really creating the new system. If it had been created in England there never would have been any opposition to it and the world would long ago have forgotten the cumbersome British units, with their base ratio of 12 (the duodecimal system) and their absurd arithmetic complications.

The Metric system is taught in our schoolbooks only as a side issue. Popularly, and in ordinary business affairs, we still reckon in feet, inches, yards, rods, roods, acres; in pounds, ounces (two kinds!), tons (of various kinds), and in quarts, pecks, gallons, racks, bushels and all the inextricable tangle of wet and dry measures, giving ourselves and imposing upon our children an amount of unnecessary intellectual labor that would make an intelligent horse from the planet Mars laugh at us.

Everybody who has to read scientific books, or to do business with foreign people, other than English, must necessarily learn the Metric system, in addition to the British, because scientific men long ago discarded the latter with contempt, and practically the whole civilized world, outside Anglo-Saxondom, uses, or is beginning to use, the Metric system exclusively.

It only requires a glance to show the inherent superiority of this system. In the first place it is based on the decimal ratio of numbers, or ratio of ten, instead of the duodecimal, or ratio of twelve. As Alexander Siemens has remarked: "All people on earth who count, count by tens." The ease with which calculations made by tens and multiples and sub-multiples of ten, can be performed is evident to everybody. Arithmetic becomes play in such a case. Then, the Metric system is so contrived that all its units, whether they represent length and area or weight, are derived from one common base. This base is the meter. By squaring the meter, or its sub-divisions, you get the unit measures of surface; by cubing the meter, or its subdivisions, you get not only the unit measures of capacity but those of weight. They are all linked together.

Thus, a gram, the metric basis of measures of weight, is the weight of one cubic centimeter (a centimeter is 100th of a meter) of water, and all the other weights are related to the gram by multiplying or dividing it by ten, or multiples of ten.

The fact that the French undertook to make the meter a precise fraction of the circumference of the earth (one tenth-millionth of the distance from the pole to the equator), and failed, because nobody has ever succeeded in making an exact measurement of the earth's girth, does not affect the practical value of the Metric system, because the length of the meter is now fixed by a standard bar of metal kept under the care of the International Metric Commission.

It doesn't really matter what the basal unit is so long as it is convenient to use. The meter is but little longer than the yard, and both are arbitrary lengths chosen for convenience. But the system based on the yard is complicated, confusing, irregular and mentally wasteful, while that based on the meter is simple, straightforward, consistent and quickly convenient.

Men Who Made America

Sir Walter Raleigh—A True Knight, Without Fear and Without Reproach, as Strong as an Oak, as Tender as a Vine, Fearless as a Corsair, but Always the Perfect Gentleman.

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company.

FORTUNATE, indeed, is the nation that has at the fountain head of its history a name so illustrious as that of Raleigh, a knight like Bayard, without fear and without reproach, combining within his character the strength of the oak with the tenderness of the vine, fearless as one of the old Corsairs, and yet, withal, as perfect a gentleman as ever breathed.

In this, the greatest English-speaking land upon the face of the earth, there will ever be a deep-seated interest in Sir Walter, for it was he who first dreamed of the mighty empire over which "Old Glory" today so proudly floats.

Raleigh was a courtier of the courtiers. No man was ever more soldly at home 'midst the pomp and circumstance of royalty. No man ever more keenly enjoyed the magnificence of palaces and thrones. But he was too big a man to be deceived by the royal shows to which he was, by the necessities of the case, obliged to devote so much of his time.

It was his duty, as one of the high-born gentlemen of the realm and the special favorite of the Queen, to have much to do with the glittering inanities of the Court.

And right well did the gallant knight play his part; but in the midst of the brilliant stage-play, the great man was thinking of other and better things, and among them planting Englishmen beyond the seas where they might establish an English nation in the New World.

Greater than the courtier was the long-headed, far-seeing statesman, who, midst the revelries and splendors of the court, was forever dreaming of making the New World a New England, a Greater English ideas and principles and England, which should embody perpetuate them to the latest ages.

The genius for colonization which has ever been a marked characteristic of the English race found in Raleigh its devoted and most persistent champion. It was the master thought of all his thinking, the one supreme, all-controlling passion of his soul.

In the story of this man's attempt to make good his imperial dream of colonization, there is a wonderful blending of glory and pathos.

Four times did he strive to materialize his splendid vision, and, as all the world knows, four times was he doomed to deepest disappointment.

In 1578, in company with his Humphrey Gilbert, he sailed on the voyage which accomplished nothing save to give to the world the immortal epigram shouted over the waves by Sir Humphrey just as he was going down beneath the stormy waters—"The way to heaven is as near by sea as by land."

In 1584, Raleigh, undaunted by the failure of the first attempt, sent out the second expedition under Amidas and Barlow, which, on the Fourth of July of that year, reached the country now known as North Carolina. There the "meteor flag" of England was first displayed in the United States, and there, upon a sandy bank of the Carolina coast, rested the first Anglo-Saxon anchor.

Returning, the expedition reported that they had found a "goodly land," well suited for settlement, and the following year a third expedition, with over 100 men, sailed for the North Carolina region, settling at Roanoke Island, but accomplishing nothing permanent.

Still determined, Raleigh, in 1587, made his fourth and last attempt to start his English nation on this Western Continent. Like the others, it was a failure, save as it was to contribute to the "romance of history" its mute story of the "Lost Colony."

Sir Walter could try no more. His funds were exhausted. He had staked all—and lost.

In the meantime, other matters of vital importance engaged his attention at home, chief among them being the crushing of the power of Spain, and nothing more was done by him along the line of promoting his daring project.

But to the day of his death he cherished with intense delight the dream of his manhood's prime, and among the very last words that he uttered was the prophecy that his vision of an English-speaking commonwealth in America would ultimately be realized.

Nor was the prediction made in vain. We know how, in 1607, eleven years before Raleigh made his exit from the stage of the world, a permanent English settlement was made at Jamestown, a settlement which, through much tribulations, was to live and grow into the mighty nation that today holds the controlling hand in world politics, whose energy is the marvel of the world and whose speech and ideas seem destined to become coextensive with humanity.

Surely, then, Sir Walter cannot be left out of the account in our story of the Makers of America.

The Sun at the North Pole

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"DOES the sun shine in Summer at the North Pole?"—William Pape.

A.—Yes. If the horizon as viewed from the North Pole is very clear and free from clouds and vapors, three days before the vernal equinox—near March 21—the sun's upper edge will just be seen. And if very clear, for three days after the autumnal equinox—near September 21—the upper edge of the solar disc will set.

Thus from the poles a part of the sun can be seen during six months and six days, nearly, but subject to slight changes. This remarkable fact of the sun's limb rising nearly seventy-two hours before exact vernal equinox and setting nearly seventy-two hours after exact mathematical autumnal equinox is due to the fact of refraction of light in its passage through the earth's atmosphere.

This makes all cosmical bodies on the horizon to appear to be higher than they actually are. Then the time of rising of the sun as seen from either pole is hastened and of setting retarded. Thus the polar folk alternately have six months and six days of solar light and an equal duration of its absence.

Q.—Is it true that sea level at the North Pole is 4,000 miles higher than the Equator, or in other words, equal to the radius of the earth?—Same.

A.—The word higher cannot be used here. Of course, sea level at the poles is at a distance from the earth's centre named the polar radius. Several measurements have been made and they agree within minute limits of error, of an order equal to methods used by two men measuring a stick ten feet long. Clarke's measures published in 1878 gives the polar radius of the earth as 3,949.79 miles and the equatorial radius 3,963.296, the polar therefore being 13.506 miles shorter.

Q.—Is the temperature of a tropical mountain 20,000 feet or more in altitude equal to the temperature at the North Pole?—Same.

A.—Temperatures vary constantly and as the mean annual temperatures of the poles and of a tropical mountain more than 20,000 feet high have not been measured, the question cannot be answered. To guess at an answer, I would say that the temperature on a high equatorial mountain would be more nearly constant than at the poles.
